NEW YEARS DAY

Appropriately Observed at the Capitol.

President and Mrs. Cleveland Receive Calls,

Assisted By the Ladies of the Cabinet.

The Guests and the Gowns Worn.

Senators, Representatives, Judges, Army Officers and Distinguished Men and Women Call.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 —Probably in no other city of the country does that peculiarly American custom of exchanging New Year's calls continue to flourish with the same vigor as in the capital of the nation. Although in other cities the custom has come to be more regarded in the breach than in the observance, in Washington everybody in official life either receives or pays calls. The president himself set the fashion in this matter and naturally the white house is the focus of interest on the first day of the new year, for there is congregated the most distinguished persons in the land in official life, and the most attractive conditions.

The ceremonies of the day began at 11 o'clock, but long before that hour a great throng of people, considering the state of the whether, had gathered at the entrance to the white house grounds to peep into the carriages as they rolled through the gates laden with pretty women and distinguished statesmen, and gorgeously attired members of the diplomatic corps. Within the grounds policemen were properly stationed to guide the visitors and preserve order.

The old white house had been thoroughly prepared for the day's ceremonies. Outside a canopy had been erected for the protection of the guests who came in carriages. On the inside canvass covers had been laid carefully to prevent the destruction of the rich carpets by the trampling of thousands of feet which were to pass over them.

As in the past year the decorations of the rooms were all floral, but there was a noticeable difference from the plan of last year in the free use of potted plants and palms in place of the great banks of cut flowers which formerly graced the room. Consequently there was something lacking in the color, but form an artistic post of view, this was more than compensated for by the beauty of the growing plants neatly arranged in pure white jardinniers, of basket work design.

The guests entered at the main door of the mansion and crossing the lobby, passed into the red room, where they had an opportunity to divest themselves of their wraps and coats before entering the blue room, where the reception party was stationed. Two heavy couches had been so arranged across the room as to leave a small open space in the center, thus shielding the president, the mistress of the white house and her servants from the long line of callers.

The blue room, always the prettiest of the white house suite, was beautifully decorated with flowers, a star shaped white blossom prevailing in such profusion as to charmingly subdue the all-prevailent blue tint of the artificial decorations and furnishings. In the lobby just within the main doorway was stationed the full marine band, making a gallant show in their brilliant scarlet uniforms and discoursing with splendid effect a specially arranged program of artistic merit

The music began with a grand inaugural march by Fancuilli, the leader of the band, followed by selections from the band and closing with the national anthems.

The first to arrive at the executive mansion were the ladies of the cabinet, who were to assist Mrs. Cleveland in receiving. They were ushered up stairs, where they removed their wraps, and were greeted by Mrs. Cleveland.

The reception was to begin at 11 o'clock and at that hour president and Mrs. Cleveland came down stairs, followed by the cabinet ladies and other guests who were to stand behind the line. The Marine band struck up the inaugural march as the receiving party proceeded to the room in this order: Colonel Wilson with Lieutenant Gilmore, then the president and Mrs. Cleveland, and then the members of the cabinet with their ladies. They entered the blue room and for a few moments there was a general exchange of the compliments of the season between the persons in the room

Mrs. Cleveland was attired in white morie antique, heavily embroidered with silver, and with full sleeves.

Her mother, Mrs Perrin, wore a heliotrope velvet gown, ornamented with the silver passamenterie.

Mrs Gresham wore a gown of black and white satin. Black formed the most of the skirt, which was bordered with white satin, and this material also formed the sleeves

Mrs. Carlisle wore gray moire antique trimmed with sable and passamenterie.

Mrs Lamont was in buttercup satin elegantly brocaded in white with a lace patern. Brown velvet and lace formed a becoming collarette finish.

Mrs Bissell wore white satin brocade with a waist in a fluffy effect of white chiffon trimmed with pearl and silver passamentries.

Miss Herbert was in a light blue satin richly brocaded in pink and finely plaited chiffon frills on the bodice.

Mrs. Olney wore purple bengaline richly embroidered and trimmed with lace.

Miss Morton wore a toilete of black and white striped moire and brocade with point lace

Mrs. Hoke Smith, being in poor health, did not take part in the reception.

A number of ladies, including the wives and daughters of prominent officials and personal friends of Mrs Clevland, had been invited to take positions behind the line with the receiving party, so that there was a brilliant array of handsome costumes in the room.

These ladies were: Mrs Fuller, Mrs. Scholield, Mrs Casey, Mrs Thurber, Mrs McAdoo, Mrs Walker, Mrs Ramsey, Mrs Chadwick, Mrs. Heywood, Mrs. Walsh, (Georgia): Mrs. Sherman, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs McPherson, Mrs. Crisp, Miss Bertha Crisp, Miss Inez Ferdet, Mrs. Cockran, Mrs. Strauss, Mrs Catchings, Mrs. Daniels, Mrs Henderick, Miss Murphy, Miss Voorhees, Mrs Maxwell, Mrs Bowler, Mrs. Eckels, Miss Curtis, the Misses Hamlin, Mrs. Uhl, Miss Kennedy, Miss Mabel Johnson, Miss Nannie Leiter, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs W J Carlisle, Mrs Braddor, Miss Queen, Miss Helmur.

The program had been arranged, as is customary, for the admission of the different classes of officials in the order of their rank, usually the vice president is the first to pay his respects to the president, but this year Mr. Stevenson is south on account of the illness of his daughter.

The first callers were the members of the cabinet, then came the diplomatic corps, the judges of the various courts, senators and representatives, officers of the army, and various other officials, old soldiers and distinguished men in all ranks.

The secretary of state and Mrs Gresham received the diplomatic corps at the Arlington hotel from 12 30 to 1, and other callers afterwards Mrs Gresham was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Andrews, of Chicago, Mrs. Capt Fuller, her neice, and other ladies.

Mrs. Carlisle received assisted by Mrs. Wm K. Carlisle, Miss Queenan' Miss Heolm, of Covington, and other ladies.

Mrs. Lamont, Mrs Bissel, Mrs Olney, Miss Morton and Miss Herbert also received callers.

MAD FROM POLITICS!

Daniel Trombly Murdered His Wife and Child

And Then He Set Fire to His Home and Made Good His Escape.

BAY CITY, Mich, Jan. 1 —Daniel J Trombley, a lumber inspector twenty-eight years of age, crazed over politics, murdered his wife and child this morning, set fire to the house and made his escape.

The murder was first discovered by the firemen who found Mrs. Trombley with her throat cut lying on the bed burned almost to a crisp. The child had evidently been smothered, as no marks were found upon it.

Trombley ran on and independent ticket for county clerk at the late election, canvassing the entire county and making wild speeches

FEE AND SALARY LAW.

Attorney General Wants it Purged of Unconstitutional Features.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1 —Attorney General Ketchum has filed suit in the circuit court, in which Governor Mathews is made the relater, praying that the fee and salary law of 1891 be purged of its unconstitutional features and be restored to the form in which it passed the legislature. The complaint says that the law was regularly passed, and that it then contained salaries for each of the officers in Shelby county; that the senate made amendments to the bill, and when those amendments were rejected by the house a conference was held in which the senate receded from some of its amendments and the house acceded to others; that the bill as introduced, amended and engrossed, contained provisions for each of the offices, but when it was delivered to the secretary of state for filing and custody one of the sections had been so changed that no provision appeared for the offices of treasurer, recorder and auditor of Shelby county. He says that this ommission was made either through fraud or carelessness, but he is unable to determine which. All the clerks and others who had anything to do with the bill after it passed will be called as witnesses and it is expected to show that the change was made through corrupt means It is intimated that the attorney general has information which will create a sensation when it comes out.

MRS. AMELIA J. BLOOMER.

The Earliest Advocate of Woman's Dress Reform Dead.

OMAHA, Neb, Jan. 1.—Mrs Amelia J Bloomer, wife of D. C Bloomer, died at Council Bluffs yesterday. She was one of the earliest advocates of national dress for women and her public use of the new costume caused it to be called the Bloomer costume. She was seventy seven years old and a native of Homer, N. Y. She was married in 1840 and issued "The Lily," a woman suffrage paper, from 1849 to 1853 She came to Council Bluffs about twenty-five years ago. She attained a national reputation as a lecturer and advocate of woman suffrage and temperance.

SUPPRESS ROBY.

Stringent Measures for the Legislature to Consider.

The Texts of Three Bills Which Will be Submitted—Message of Governor Matthews.

VALPARAISO, Ind, Jan. 1 —Last night Circuit Judge John H Gillett sent to Governor Matthews the texts of three bills which are proposed to be submitted to the coming legislature of Indiana. They relate to prize fighting and horse racing with a view to remedy past and existing evils, especially Roby fighting and racing. Roby is in Judge Gillett's jurisdiction.

One bill makes more prespicuous what a prize fight is and defines it very closely; another bill makes a felony, a penitentiary offence, of fighting, sparring or boxing for a prize, or for fighting, sparring or boxing where fifty persons pay for admission.

Another bill prohibits horse racing for prizes or paid admissions between November 1st and April 15th, or at any time during the year for over thirty days out of the fifty days. In case of violation of this act, if the local civil authorities do not stop the racing the governor is given power, not now possessed by him, in certain ways of enforcing the laws. Minute procedure for an injuction is given in the act.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan 1 —Governor Matthews has written that part of his message touching upon the Roby question. He said that he had made some very strong recommendations which, if acted upon, would result in the suppression of Robyism in the state. In fact, he said he had handled Roby without gloves. A few weeks ago he had some correspondence with Judge Gillette, of Lake county, and informed the judge that he would be thankful for any suggestion which he or any other competent citizen might make. He did not know that Judge Gillette was preparing suggestions in the form of a bill to be introduced in the legislature, but he hoped such was the case

AN OLD PRACTICE.

Indiana Treasurers Have Been in the Habit of Loaning State Money.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1 —The failure of Treasurer Gall, through the loss of $66,000 of state money in the Indianapolis National bank, is causing a great deal of comment, and in connection with it there has come to light the practice of such officers of lending money to the banks and thus evading the law.

It appears that the money was loaned to the bank and a certificate of deposit was issued to Haughey and by Haughey indorsed and turned over to the treasurer. In this transaction the latter's name did not appear upon the bank's books and no investigation could have shown that he was lending the state's money. Before the bank failed Gall secured notes as collateral and when the receiver took charge he found these notes had been taken from the bank The parties who gave them were notified to call at the Union Trust company and pay them, and by this means the receiver learned where the notes were and under what circumstances they had left the bank, and he demanded their return. After consulting attorneys the notes were returned and Gall was left with no evidence of the indebtednessbut the certificate indorsed by Haughy, and he is compelled to share the loss with the general depositors.

It is said that Gall followed a practice which has been general among state treasurers and which was designed to cover up the fact that they were violating the law which forbids the lending of money.

HUNG BY A MOB.

Kentucky Begins the Year With a Lynching Bee.

Tom Blair Taken From Jail and Hung to a Railroad Trestle.

MT. STERLING, Ky., Jan. 1 —About 2 o'clock this morning a mob of twenty-five men went to the county jail, overpowered Jailer Best, secured the keys and took from the jail Tom Blair, of Morgan county, and hung him to a railroad trestle in the city limits.

Blair fought desperately for his life, and was beaten into almost insensibility before he was hung.

Blair was one of the parties who assisted in killing Captain J. L Bomar in this city last February. He was cleared of the charge and was in jail for shooting with intent to kill a few days ago, It is supposed that friends of Bomar were the lynchers

Eakin, Misses Ellen Spencer, of Indianapolis, Mary Kent, of St. Mary's, Ohio, Emma Jenkinson.

The initial entertainment given by The Thirteen last evening at the home of Miss Yarnelle, on West Wayne street, was very charming in all its appointments, and right merrily was the old year danced out and the new one in by the club and their guests. The house was prettily decorated with holly, mistletoe and evergreen effectively arranged. The dance program was in charge of a mandolin orchestra and the number of favor dances interspersed made it exceedingly pleasing. At 11 o clock a delicious collation of salads, ices and coffee was served. The patronesses were Mesdames E. F. Yarnelle, A. J. Laubach and Cash Miller. The club and their guests were Misses Lavon Sperry, Julia Rumsey, Lula Laubach, Emma Ash, Mary Moffat, Edith Yarnelle, Mary Shoaff, Lillian Ash, Bessie McCracken, Maud Harrison, Gertrude Mayhew, Jean McLachlan, Messrs. R G. Nonnamaker, Hugh Keegan, H. C. Crane, Clarence Swann, Weatherhogg, Will Wood, Nathan Smyser, L C. Ganter, of Akron, Ohio; Fred McCracken, Ralph Yarnelle, Sam Moffat, C W. Talmage, Charles Stringer, Robert Robertson.

The condemning of alum as an unwholesome ingredient in baking powders by the government authorities as well as by physicians generally, has not deterred manufacturers of such powders from foisting them on an unsuspecting public Following is a partial list of the alum powders found in the stores

"Calumet," "Chicago Yeast," "Kenton," "Grant's Bon Bon," "Hotel," "Taylor's One Spoon," "Climax," "Snow Puff," "Snow Ball," "Giant," "Milk," "Crown," "Unrivaled," "Silver Star," "Davis' O K.," "Forest City," "Monarch," "K. C," "Loyal," "Manhattan," "Crystal," "Hatchet," "Home," "Echo," "Perfection," "Rocket," "Town Talk," "Imperial," "White Rose," etc

It is safe to reject all brands sold with a prize. All powders sold at twenty five cents or less a pound are sure to be made of alum. Dr. Wiley the government chemist, in his official examination of baking powders at the World's Fair, threw out all 'alum powders," classing them as unwholesome

Morton Inaugurated.

ALBANY, N. Y, Jan. 1 —Levi P. Morton was inaugurated as governor of New York at noon today. The ceremonies were simple.

A GENUINE FREAK.

One of the Most Remarkable Cases on Record.

A Fort Wayne Kleptomaniac Steals Over Three Thousand Separate Articles in About Four Years.

The longer the Fort Wayne police examine into the case of Peter Deutschmann, of No. 90 East Lewis street, the more convinced are they that they have the biggest freak who was ever behind the bars at the police station. All day yesterday the officers were busy sorting over the plunder which was taken from the barn in the rear of Deutschmann's home. During the day hundreds of persons called at the station to look for missing articles. Anyone who has missed anything in Fort Wayne during the past four years can likely locate it now by going to the station house The plunder includes no less than 3 000 separate articles. The kleptomaniac seemed to be a genuine magnet and never went out of his own home but what he attracted something loose and carried it off. Among the articles at the station were telegraph instruments, patent medicines, beer pumps, watches, shoemakers' lasts, surgeon's instruments, part of Geary's museum, electrotpyes, rubber garden hose, shingles, lath, lumber, door locks several hundred keys, hundreds of articles stolen from the Pennsylvania Railway company, besides hundreds and hundreds of other articles of a list which would fill a newspaper. If the whole load of plunder was put up at auction it would not bring $50, and yet there is several hundred dollars' worth of plunder if estimated at first cost. Among the articles was a lot of prayer books, so that the man likely never went to church without stealing a book of some kind. The thief had a habit of carrying a satchel with him whenever he went away from home. When arrested he had this with him and upon examination the officers found a fine $30 injector for a steam engine, besides some valuable tools. Curiously enough the Pennsylvania officials considered the man one of their best and most honest employes Deutschmann, however, seems to have been a genuine Dr. Jekill and Mr Hyde, and his true character has been suspected by neighbors, who were afraid of the fellow as he was thought to be a thief, and was also said to be a dangerous anarchist

The fellow was seen at the jail last evening by THE SENTINEL reporter Deutschmann is not an unintelligent looking fellow; but he has a bad face and an experienced eye would put him down as a freak of some kind. He said he came to America about seven years ago and was married in Fort Wayne two years later. Upon being asked where he got all the things found in his barn the fellow got very angry and saucy. He said he bought every one of them.

PIONEER FIDDLERS.

Twenty Veterans Wrestle With "Rye Straw" at Columbus, Ind.

COLUMBUS, Ind, Jan 1 —The most novel entertainment ever given in this city was a pioneer fiddling match gotten up by a daily paper and given in Crump's theater last night for the benefit of the poor of this city The large theater was packed. William Waltman presided and made a pioneer talk Ex-Mayor Stader was master of ceremonies. Twenty fiddlers dressed in pioneer garb, ranging in age from sixty to eighty years, opened with a grand overture, "The Rye Straw" None but pioneer log cabin tunes of almost colonial days were played, such as "Leather Breeches," "Forked Deer," "Old Dan Tucker" etc Each contestant was given a prize of five new Columbian half dollars Two hundred and fifty dollars were realized for the poor.

KICKED IN THE DOOR.

Henry Hageman Bound Over to Keep the Peace.

Large Crowd at Police Court This Morning—New Year's Revelers Sent to Jail—Other Jottings.

There was a very large police court this morning, Mayor Oakley presiding

The first case called was that of Thomas Hageman. Late last night Officer Sommers, who was on Chicago street, heard a loud noise at the hom of Mrs. Margaret Fry Rushing over the officer found Hageman engaged in the playful sport of kicking in the front door. He had already succeeded in going through two pannels and had succeeded in thoroughly terrifying the inmates. Hageman was placed under arrest and was tried this morning on the charge of surety of the peace. He plead not guilty and said that he had roomed with Mrs. Fry and did not see why he could not go into the house when he wanted to. Officer Sommers testified that the prisoner had been locked up before and Mrs Fry testified that the fellow had often threatened to do her bodily injury and that she was afraid of her life. Mayor Oakley bound Hagemen over to the circuit court in the sum of $100 and he went to jail

SENTIMENT, BUT NOT SENSE.

Last night, at the south depot, Officers Paul and Stoll arrested a young vagrant, who gave several names and finally admitted that his right name was Massil. The boy could give no good account of himself and acted in a very suspicious manner. While the officers were making the arrest two of the actors of the d'Arville Opera company stepped up and interceded for the boy Actors are proverbially tender hearted in some ways and Messrs. Boucicault and Shea, the two actors, meant well, but they spoilt it all by getting mad at the police. Going to the station house they offered to put up bail for the boy, but this was refused. This morning the boy plead not guilty to a charge of vagrancy, but was sent to jail in default of $5 and costs.

COMMON DRUNKS.

The common drunks who were on trial were. John Brown, John O'Connell, Charles Clancy, Charles Roempke and Jacob Sprowl. They were fined $1 and costs each.

HELD UP.

F. C. Hormann, employed by Charles Pape, was held up and robbed of his watch by two men at the corner of Main street, near Griffith, about 7 o'clock last evening Hormann was stopped by two men, one of whom asked him something about a labor union. Hormann said he didn't know anything about it and the highwaymen slugged him on general principals. They took his watch and then ran. Hormann picked himself up and went to Hahn's saloon, where a little later the two men who had held him up appeared. Upon seeing their victim, they ran but later Officer Knock caught one of the fellows in Schele's saloon on Harrison street, where he was playing pool. The prisoner was taken to the police station, where the watch was found on his person.

At police court this morning the prisoner said his name was Frank McGill and that he was employed at Myer's livery stable and boarded at the Beyer's boarding house He told an entirely different story from that told by Hormann. McGill said that Hormann was playing cards with a party of three fellows of which he (McGill) was one. After spending all their money for drinks Hormann said he still had his watch and could put that up. All three of the men went outside the saloon and in the fight which followed Hormann dropped his watch and McGill says he picked it up and intended keeping it for safety. The story, however, looked a trifle shaky and the mayor bound the prisoner over in the sum of $300 He went to jail.

CAR ROBBED

Last night some hungry thieves broke open a car at the Lake Shore yards and stole a lot of quail, pheasants and other game. Two packages of tobacco were also taken.

TONIGHT

MASONIC TEMPLE—Walker Whiteside and Company in "Hamlet."
CITY Y. M. C. A.—New Year's Reception
GOOD TEMPLARS—Meet at Their Hall.

DATE your letters 1895.

HUNT up a new calendar.

THE SENTINEL wishes all its readers a Happy New Year.

LET every good resolution you have made be kept throughout the years to come.

WITH snow all around us, Fort Wayne remains "the one green spot in Indiana."

IT costs as much to govern New York now as it cost to govern the entire United States in 1861.

PEOPLE who live in the United States should avoid using Canadian silver The laws of this country provide no penalty for counterfeiting them, and the manufacturers of queer feel comparatively safe in handling them.

THE political climate of Europe seems to be better adapted than that of this country to the production of grand old men. Gladstone was eighty-five Saturday, Bismarck will be eighty next April, and Leo XIII will be eighty-five in March. The nearest we can come to producing a grand old man is our old Roman, Allen G. Thurman.

NATURE is now fighting the battles of China better than she can, or at least better than she has done. A rigorous winter is a hard thing on the little fellows of sunny Japan The campaign of the Japs amid the snows of northern China recall the sufferings of the French upon their disastrous retreat under Napoleon from Moscow after burning the Kremlin.

TAKEN altogether, it is safe to say that the exposures made by the Lexow investigating committe in New York are the most disgraceful and discouraging that the whole history of municipal corruption can show. It begins to look as though the biggest rascals on the force were promoted to the highest places, and that increased capacity for usefulness was exercised wholly in squeezing and protecting criminals, instead of bringing them to punishment

IT is likely that horseless carriages will soon become comparatively common They can be propelled by either steam or electricity. A machine somewhat of the bicycle pattern, driven by electricity, would be feasible certainly. Paris has at present a fad for carriages propelled without horses. Whether anything reasonable and useful will come of it is uncertain. There was lately a race of horseless vehicles from Paris to Rouen, which a steam carriage, belonging to Count de Dion, won by traveling 17½ miles an hour. It would not matter so much whether we had horseless carriages if we could only get horseless trucks and express wagons. These huge vehicles, thundering along with the reins held by ignorant reckless drivers, are a perpetual danger to locomotion in the streets of a city The drivers sometimes take a brutal delight in seeing how close they can come to a pedestrian without actually knocking him down. They dare not do that, but they take their revenge for this deprivation by frightening him as nearly to death as possible.

The Terrible Year.

Many people will be glad 1894 is over. In some respects it has been the most disastrous year within their experience. There is less actual suffering this winter than there was last, and we do not hear so much of the thousands of unemployed who must be fed by charity in the large cities. But it is not that work is plentiful yet. It is that everything has come down to the hardest kind of hardpan, and people are grimly economizing to the last cent.

In our own country epidemics of typhoid fever, smallpox and diphtheria have raged with fury in many places It is safe to say there have been more murders and suicides than were ever known in any one year before in the United States. The holding up and robbing of railway trains by armed desperadoes have prevailed to an unheard of extent. Even in the safest, quietest parts of the east the train robbing epidemic broke loose.

The country was kept in a state of turmoil many months—first by the coal miners' strike, then by the Pullman strike and the consequent riots, bloodshed and wrecking of property. Fires during 1894 have been unusually destructive to human and animal life. At a fire in Baltimore, on April 10, 130 horses were burned to death. In the destruction of the American Glucose works at Buffalo two days later 12 workmen lost their lives, and $1,200,000 worth of property went up in flame. How many people were burned to death in the awful forest fires in the northwest will never be known for certain. Whole towns were wiped from the face of the earth. It is certain that not less than 500 people perished in these fires, which themselves resulted from the most terrible drought this country has known in many years. Except a portion of the southern states, drought prevailed over nearly the whole United States.

The black plague in China early in the year swept off not less than 50,000 lives, according to the best information that can be obtained. Memorable, too, has 1894 been for terrible earthquakes. In February two such widely separated regions as Greece and Venezuela were visited by seismic disturbances, with heavy loss of life and the destruction of millions of property. In Venezuela two towns were annihilated. The shocks in Constantinople in July, while not so severe, were yet fatal to a number of lives Early in November Sakata, a town on the northwest coast of Japan, experienced an earthquake shock from which it will take years to recover. Many houses and families were swallowed up bodily. Not less than 800 people were killed outright and 200 more severely wounded. The record closes with a violent and destructive earthquake in Hungary Dec. 19.

It is remarkable that when one of these convulsions of the earth's crust takes place in a given locality the tidal waves from it extend underground to countries far remote from the scene of the original disturbance. Nov. 16, not long after the cataclysm at Sakata, came the earthquake horrors in southern Italy, whereby in Sicily alone 100 persons were killed.

Nature seems indeed to have wreaked her vengeance on man in 1894. Besides the eastern war, which he brought about himself, she has visited upon him earthquake, plague, drought, fire and flood. The storms in the United States at least have been seldom excelled in fury and destructiveness A tornado in Texas in March killed 16 persons and injured 50 more. A storm in May annihilated a million dollars' worth of property in Ohio, Michigan and some of the states westward. The months of May and June were signalized in various parts of the country by some of the most destructive storms ever known. Wherever they occurred they were peculiarly fatal to human life.

On the whole, if we have come through 1894 with enough to eat and wear and a shelter over our heads, if no awful griefs have bowed us down and we have fairly good health, then, really and truly, we have much to be thankful for at the beginning of 1895

There is a promise that we shall have at last in one of the committee rooms of the United States senate some talk that is not about silver and the tariff. A resolution has been offered in that august body favoring the political union of the United States and Canada. The committee on foreign relations has charge of the resolution, and the senate recommended the committee to give hearings on the subject. If during these hearings the committee on foreign relations could only occupy the senate chamber, while the senate occupied the committee room, and if in addition the discussions of the question could be opened to the public while orators from both sides of the line were to be invited to say their say, it would be the most entertaining show that congress has offered to the public since a certain senator hoisted his stockinged feet upon his desk in plain sight of all the company.

At the close of 1894 cast up all your accounts, beg forgiveness for all your sins and make your good resolutions for 1895. Then stop fooling and go to work.

When a bank employee is known to bet on horse races or to speculate in stocks, it is safe to discharge him.

What a pity it is that there is a job for somebody in nearly everything!

Dyspeptics, naturally enough, are afraid of hot cake, biscuit, pastry, pie crust and muffins. Hot food may be eaten with impunity when made with Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

Diphtheria seems to be abating in Fort Wayne just now. According to Sanitary Officer Miller there are only nine cases of diphtheria in the city at the present time, and four of these are convalescing. There are only six cases of scarlet fever in the city

A NEW YEAR'S SONG.

BY JEROME WOOD

Turn on, old Time, my boy, keep the ball rolling
Just for a kick, my boy, don't let it flag
Set the bells jingling to keep them from tolling
Joy give man be he in velvet or rag
Laugh, quaff, brush away tear
We're waiting, come on! Bring in the New Year!

And why not be hopeful, and, when we can, jolly?
The woes of the past we need not recall
Dispel, then, all sighs and drive out melancholy
But, hark! There's a voice and a sound in the hall!
Laugh, quaff, brush away tear!
Ope the door wide! You're welcome, New Year!

A MODERN WOOING.

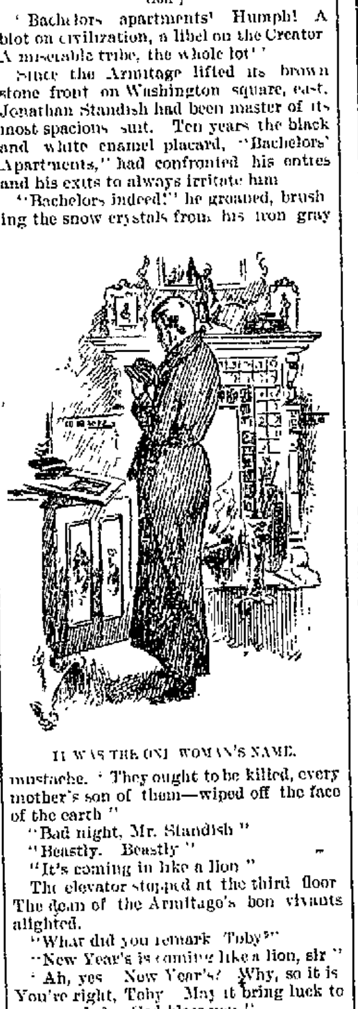
A NEW YEAR'S INCIDENT.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"Bachelors apartments! Humph! A blot on civilization, a libel on the Creator A miserable tribe, the whole lot!"

Since the Armitage lifted its brown stone front on Washington square, east, Jonathan Standish had been master of its most spacious suit. Ten years the black and white enamel placard, "Bachelors' Apartments," had confronted his entries and his exits to always irritate him

"Bachelors indeed!" he groaned, brushing the snow crystals from his iron gray mustache. "They ought to be killed, every mother's son of them—wiped off the face of the earth "



IT WAS THE ONE WOMAN'S NAME.

"Bad night, Mr. Standish "

"Beastly. Beastly "

"It's coming in like a lion "

The elevator stopped at the third floor The dean of the Armitage's bon vivants alighted.

"What did you remark Toby?"

"New Year's is coming like a lion, sir "

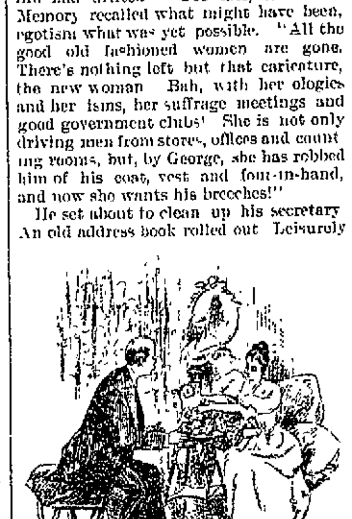
"Ah, yes New Year's! Why, so it is You're right, Toby May it bring luck to you, my lad. God bless you."

Richer by a gold eagle, Toby descended in glee, while Standish crossed the threshold of his luxurious semblance of a home. A fire crackled brightly. Creature comforts were on every side, but the lord of the manor felt stifled. Was it the ominous silence, the pertinent placard in the vestibule or disappointment in not meeting a single boon companion at the club? Where were they? What was up?

It was New Year's eve They were doubtless in the bosom of their families or the guest of honor in the home of a kindred, while he, Jonathan Standish, boy and man for 50 years in the metropolis, was without home, kith or kindred More than one of his forefathers slept in Trinity churchyard. The stately house in Stuyvesant square where so many, many happy days of his boyhood had passed was long since relegated to a boarding house And they were going—oh, so rapidly!—all the old familiar faces

"Won't do, won't do," he muttered, slipping into his eider gown Antagonistic to his tastes and temperament was the life he led He was the victim of a series of circumstances that he fancied he was powerless to have averted and so his life had drifted "Too late, too late!" Memory recalled what might have been, egotism what was yet possible. "All the good old fashioned women are gone. There's nothing left but that caricature, the new woman Bah, with her ologies and her isms, her suffrage meetings and good government clubs! She is not only driving men from stores, offices and counting rooms, but, by George, she has robbed him of his coat, vest and four-in-hand, and now she wants his breeches!"

He set about to clean up his secretary An old address book rolled out Leisurely he turned the pages The addresses smacked for the most part of the turf and the counting room.



"WHEN I TELL YOU OF THE WILD GOOSE CHASE YOU HAVE GIVEN ME."

"Miss Blackmore, 189 Broadway." It was the one woman's name in the little red book Standish lit his pipe and drew up his chair to the open hearth.

"What a game of whist that woman plays! I wish she were here now. What a rubber we could have if Daniels and the captain would drop in! There's not a man at the club that can match her. There's a woman of horse sense! No new fangled notions about her!" And Standish's thoughts went back to Mrs Vandyke's parlor at Manhattan. Mrs Vandyke was a dilapidated society woman who resorted to summer boarders to replenish her coffers Late in the season Standish chanced at her cottage, and the domesticity of the environment charmed him, and soon Standish was enrolled among the widow's most substantial guests

The night of his arrival it rained incessantly The guests were driven from the verandas to the parlor Before Standish could escape Mrs. Vandyke proposed a game of whist. He had an old fashioned reverence for womankind, but when it came to playing whist with them he had his prejudices, but he consented. It did not escape his keen glance that his partner, Miss Blackmore, was not of his world or the type of women he had known and admired in his youth

Certainly she had little in common with the "set" in which Mrs Vandyke had singed her wings But hers was the voice and manner of the well bred woman of experience—experience derived from personal contact with cruel facts rather than from the dilettantism of the boudoir or the drawing room. She was, moreover, such a strong partner that he did what he had not been guilty of for 20 years—frankly pleaded that an acquaintance so pleasantly begun might not end so abruptly Miss Blackmore smiled, handed him her card and told him she was always at 189 Broadway.

"A clever woman No nonsense about her. I meant to hunt her up before this," said Standish aloud as he wakened from his reverie.

"One hundred and eighty-nine Broadway? What the deuce can a woman—such a woman—be doing so far down town? One thousand one hundred and eighty-nine, 981 or 891 would bring her nearer a resident neighborhood. There must be a mistake."

But, then, it was 189 in the little red book Standish knew, or thought he knew, Broadway from Central park to the Battery. Neither hotel, apartment house nor private residence responded to any combination his fertile fancy could make out of Miss Blackmore's address.

The next night—New Year's night—a hansom drove up at the Armitage. With a carnation in his buttonhole, Standish entered, and it rumbled gayly toward 1189 Broadway, for he could not persuade himself that he had not omitted a figure from Miss Blackmore's address No. 1189 was a street car stable.

"Drive to 981 "

The red lamp of a Turkish bath for "men exclusively" reflected 981.

"Try 891." A wholesale toyhouse greeted cabby. When the hansom finally halted at 189, Standish alighted and scanned the directory in the hallway of a modern scraper.

"Sixth floor—R. Blackmore, draftsman "

On the fourth floor he met the janitor

"Does R. Blackmore live in this building?"

"There's a Miss Blackmore who has an office on the sixth floor Never here at night. Don't you know, man, this is a holiday?"

Standish colored. "But I thought she lived here," he stammered—"had apartments, you know."

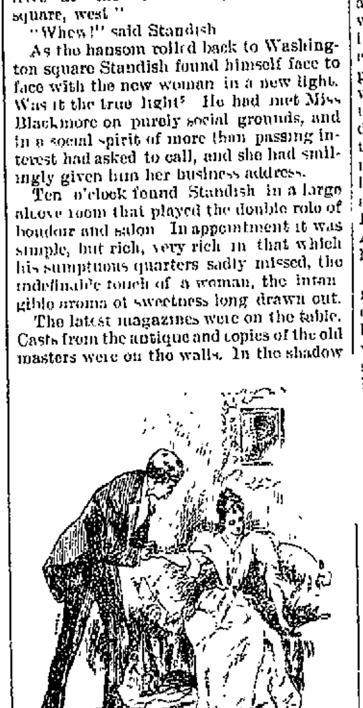
The janitor chuckled. "Miss Blackmore lives at the Columbine, Washington square, west "

"Whew!" said Standish

As the hansom rolled back to Washington square Standish found himself face to face with the new woman in a new light. Was it the true light? He had met Miss Blackmore on purely social grounds, and in a social spirit of more than passing interest had asked to call, and she had smilingly given him her business address.

Ten o'clock found Standish in a large alcove room that played the double role of boudoir and salon In appointment it was simple, but rich, very rich in that which his sumptuous quarters sadly missed, the indefinable touch of a woman, the intangible aroma of sweetness long drawn out.

The latest magazines were on the table. Casts from the antique and copies of the old masters were on the walls. In the shadow of the open hearth was a couch smothered in multicolored cushions. A cozy tea table, with a singing kettle, gleamed under a swinging lamp



"A HOME," CONTINUED STANDISH

"Just in time, Mr Standish I was about to have a cup of tea. You will share it with me, will you not? And I'm so sorry that two can't play whist "

She extended her hand as if they had parted but yesterday. Very simple and wholesome was Miss Blackmore in the flowing lines of an old rose tea gown But traces of tears, the first shed in a dozen years, trembled in her dark eyes and did not escape her New Year's caller

"When I tell you of the wild goose chase you have given me this evening, I trust you will pardon, Miss Blackmore, the tardiness of this intrusion," said Standish, relating with humorous interpolation his reckless ride in pursuit of 189

His hostess laughed—a merry laugh, with a sob in its ebb

"How long have you lived in the Columbine "

"Three years "

"And we have been neighbors all this time? It is ten since I went to the Armitage "

"So so," said Miss Blackmore "One of the Christian privileges of living in a cosmopolitan community No one knows or cares who is his neighbor, provided his comfort or his exclusiveness is unmolested "

"And do you approve of this manner of living?" said Standish

"I have never had time to give it serious thought," confessed Miss Blackmore, filling his cup. "Most of my life is spent at 189 Broadway "

"You would have preferred to have seen me there rather than here among your penates, a precious boon to me, I assure you " His flattering eyes took in the woman and the environment, each the complement of the other

"Pray do not misunderstand me," said she, with an impulsive warmth he had not suspected possible to so placid an exterior "It was force of habit alone that prompted me to give you my business address. Since we are neighbors I will be frank It never occurs to me, it hasn't for years, that anybody of your persuasion, any man, desires to see me on other than business matters That will seem strange to you, perhaps, and equally strange to women who are not part and parcel of this workaday world. Nevertheless it is true, as hundreds of women toilers have learned, some to their profit, more to their loss. You see I have never been without responsibilities I was early forced into the world to earn my own living I have created and do fill a distinctive place in the business world Experience has awakened me to the injustices that confront the woman breadwinner "

"And does it satisfy, does it pay?"

Miss Blackmore paled It was the very question she had asked herself, and in the effort to answer had shed the tears that had not dried when Standish disturbed her reverie.

Why had this stranger come at this inopportune time to learn in ten minutes more of her inner life than did her closest friends? More and more she was beginning to realize that it did not satisfy her. And this night, of all others, when she had been alone, while the whole world seemed to be reviewing friendships, the thought came to her with unusual force

"Do you believe in women voting? Do you go to their meetings, make speeches?" gasped Standish.

"No," said Miss Blackmore thoughtfully. "I believe in letting woman's work speak for itself All existing evils will be righted in time, I think, and much speedier if women would learn to talk less and labor more individually to make themselves invaluable in whatever industry they enter."

"And you have succeeded?"

"Yes, I am counted among the successful women, and I am paying the price. I have no time for social amenities. All day down town, night finds me fatigued, happy to seek the seclusion of the Columbine. Occasionally old friends who have survived the chagrin of my seeming incivility in not returning calls, accepting invitations to lunches, dinners and clubs drop in for cards or a chat. Then I try to keep in touch with new books, new pictures, new plays "

"Does it satisfy, does it pay, to live as you and I do, for example?" said Standish. "To pass in and out of the Armitage and the Columbine year in and year out, with nobody to say, 'God be with you going, heaven send you back?' Nobody to care whether you sink, swim, survive or perish, save the janitor or the elevator boy, who might perhaps miss a fee if neither of us ever returned in the flesh? As a student of sociology I have given the subject thought of late. Believe me, the only one it satisfies, the only one it pays, is the landlord Oh, I tell you, it is all wrong, and it's such men, such women, as you and I that are multiplying Columbines and Armitages, libels on the sacred name of home.

"I hope you will pardon me, Miss Blackmore, for bringing business into your 'holy of holies,'" he continued, pacing the length of the cozy den. "I have a scheme in which it's my heart's desire to enlist your sympathy, your aid. Let us help wipe out bachelor apartments and maiden dens by building for ourselves a home "

She lifted her hand forbiddingly, but "love in her eyes sat playing."

"A home," continued Standish, folding her hand in his warm grasp, "with a yard in front, a yard in the rear and a yard all around, and neighbors in whose joy we at least will rejoice and with their sorrows weep."

This accounts for the disappearance of R. Blackmore from the directory of 189 Broadway. The young man Mrs. Jonathan Standish trained in her office has succeeded to the business, thus enabling him to give his mother and sister an honorable discharge from the industrial army.

LIDA ROSE MCCABE

NEW YEAR'S IN PARIS.

How Plethoric Pocketbooks Are Emptied on Poor People.

Every one utters a sigh of relief when New Year's is over. It is the day when millions of francs change pockets and the well to do the next morning think that the saying "It is better to give than to receive," is a poor solace for the contemplation of an empty pocket. Any man, woman or child having done anything directly or indirectly for the bourgeois appeals to him for his "etrennes" Ragpickers, street sweepers, gas men, telegraph boys, letter carriers, servants of one's own household, servants of houses in which you have been entertained during the year, all expect New Year's money, and the custom of giving has been one of so long standing that it is thought legally due, at least by those who receive. Men on that unfortunate day are more tired than women. They must give to every one, little and big, to their barbers, their bootblacks, to the man who serve out their drinks, to everybody in their employ. For rich bachelors it is the season of torture. They not only have the outlays of married men, but must make expensive presents in the shape of bonbonnieres filled with the most expensive bonbons and flowers to every woman whose dinners they have eaten and whose pipers have made them dance during the year. Not only must these perishing things have an intrinsic value for variety and originality, but they must bear the seal of some expensive house on the Grande boulevard, which, well aware that bargaining is not in order and that it is harvest time, makes no scruple about putting the most outrageous price on the bills. It is no wonder that many of them about New Year's are unexpectedly called away to the country or the deathbed of some distant uncle or cousin

FESTAL DAY IN JAPAN.

All Debts Are Paid New Year's Eve. Unique Decorations.

Across the front of the house, for instance, is festooned a grass rope with a deep fringe. This is a very pleasant sort of a thing for a man to have over his door, for no evil spirit dare pass under it.

Over each entrance hangs a great tassel of grass containing a scarlet crawfish Its crooked body symbolizes the back of the aged, bent with years

This is surrounded with the branches of a kind of japonica, whose young leaves bud before the old ones are shed. This is typical of parents living when their children's children are born

In the center are the leaves of the Japanese polypody, which symbolize conjugal life because the fronds spring in pairs Embryo leaves symbolize offspring.

There is also a piece of charcoal, which means home, and two little pieces of seaweed, which typify good fortune and rejoicing.

In the middle of all is the lucky bag, a square of white paper held in by a red and white string, which marks a present.

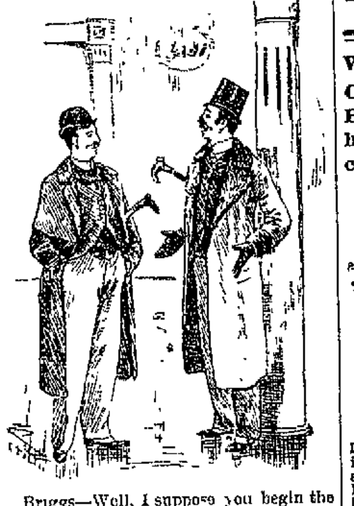
Not only the Japanese, but the Europeans in Japan also hang this tassel over their front gates. They do it partly as a compliment to the Japanese and partly for luck

The natives have another decoration, consisting of three green bamboos with sliced tops, reminding one of organ pipes, erected on each side of the portal at a distance of six feet, the right hand one springing out of a tuft of the mematsu, which signifies the female principle, and the left hand from the omatsu, which signifies the male.

In the midst of all these emblems the national flags generally wave from black lacquered poles headed with gold balls. If the common people fail to display these flags, they are admonished by the police, and the flags go up. They are generally of white silk crape, with a red sun in the center

A Japanese New Year's custom which it would not be amiss to import to America is that of paying all debts (except to foreigners) on the first day of the year. A man who fails to do so without leave of his creditors is dishonored. Consequently those creditors who are in debt try to sell everything which will fetch money, and in Tokyo a huge fair is held in the principal street on New Year's eve for this purpose.

No Change.



Briggs—Well, I suppose you begin the New Year with a lot of new resolutions?

Griggs—No; some old ones I had last year.

Cycles and Dinners.

Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, resurrects an old and forgotten story apropos of the new year. Some 20 students were celebrating the end of the year by a dinner. During the course of the dinner reference was made to the old belief that at the end of a cycle of 30,000 years everything is begun over again, and the hope was expressed that at the end of the cycle they would all find themselves at the same hotel eating the same dinner. The landlord, who presided, expressed his profound conviction that they would thus meet again and proposed the toast, "Till We Meet Again." This suggested a brilliant thought to the student who had been deputed to pay the bill, and addressing the landlord he proposed that the bill be allowed to stand until the next reunion. The landlord was somewhat taken aback, but he was true to his convictions and consented. But as the cashier was joyfully putting the money back in his pocket a brilliant thought occurred to the landlord also, and he said, "Since we shall be as today 30,000 years hence, we were therefore as today 30,000 years ago " "Without doubt," exclaimed everybody. "Very well, gentlemen," pursued the landlord, "then you asked credit of me then as you have today. Pay me for the dinner you had 30,000 years ago, and I will wait 30,000 years for the amount due for this one." It was done, and during the rest of the evening there was nothing more said about the supposed cycle.

Book of Fate.

It is said in Scotland that those who desire to learn what fate or fortune the new year has in store for them may do so by consulting the Bible on New Year's morning before breakfast. The sacred book must be laid upon a table, and those who wish to consult it must open it at random and place a finger upon one or other of the chapters at which it is opened. This chapter is read and is believed to describe in some way the happiness or misery during the ensuing year of the person making the trial.

Nothing to Him.

Strawber—I have been figuring all the morning on my accounts for 1894.

Singerly—How much has it cost you?

Strawber—I wasn't figuring that. I was figuring how much it cost my creditors.

Origin of Calling Custom.

The old fashioned custom of making New Year's calls comes from the Dutch. They considered the first day of the year a day of kindness and reconciliation

Oh, give me teeth sound, white and neat,
Oh, give me breath that's pure and sweet,
Oh, give me rosy, healthful gums,
And I will meet whatever comes;
Whatever trouble may befall,
With SOZODONT I'll meet them all.

This Matter of Darning

doesn't amount to much, with the women who use Pearline. Most of it has to be done because you persist in rubbing things over the washboard so. You have to, to get them even passably clean, if you wash with soap in the old way. Use Pearline and you'll save the darning. You haven't rubbed the things to pieces, and you won't have to mend them. And another kind of darning won't suggest itself, either, for you haven't tired yourself out to the cross point with the hardest of women's work.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 411 JAMES PYLE, New York.

THE NEW ROAD.

The F., F. W. and W. Commences Running Trains.

A Shed Fired by a Spark From an Engine—Two Nickel Plate Conductors Promoted.

The Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road is now doing business, the first train out of this city leaving here at 6 30 this morning in charge of Conductor Roulo, with Engineer Whitt at the throttle of engine No. 5. The train consisted of a combination mail, baggage and express car and two coaches, all new and equipped with all modern improvements. Among the passengers were Charles Bash, who went to Grover Hill, Ohio, and Frank W. Fischer, who went to Glandorf, Ohio The latter bears the distinction of being the first person to purchase a ticket of the company at this point, and he considers it a great honor.

The first train to arrive in this city was No. 4, in charge of Conductor Lerton and Engineer Sweet, with engine No 3, which reached here at 9.20.

The company has five locomotives and nine passenger cars, the latter quite recently out of the car shops at Wilmington, Del

The Western Union company will handle the telegraph business, while the express will be handled by the United States Express company.

There are twenty-five stations on the line, as shown by the time card, and the road crosses four other railways as follows: Cincinnati, Jackson and Michigan at Haviland, Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City at Cloverdale, Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton at Ottawa and the Lake Erie and Western near Findlay. The only stations of any note in Allen county are Baldwin and Townley.

In this city the company will use the Wabash union station and Messrs Thompson and Douglass will sell tickets, while C. H. Newton will look after the freight business

MINOR MENTION.

Lake boats have been tied up by the recent cold snap.

Wabash Trainmaster C. E. Wells, of Peru, was in the city last night.

William Altevogt, machinist at the Bass works, is off duty on account of sickness.

C. M Bissell was yesterday appointed general manager of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road. He assumed the duties of the office this morning. His headquarters will be Findlay.

Passenger coach 179 has been turned out of the Pittsburg shops looking as good as new.

Kirby Jackson, the well known Pittsburg engineer, is suffering with a lame foot and is off duty.

Nickel Plate Brakeman J F Cramer, who was taking a Christmas vacation, has resumed his run.

All the clerks in the Pittsburg and the Wabash shops are very busy today, preparing their pay rolls.

The Madelene Opera company went to Canton, Ohio, this morning on a special train over the Pittsburg

W. A. Reese, of the Wabash machine shop, has returned from Chapin, Ill., where he spent a week with his mother

Engine No. 1, of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western, has been taken in the Wabash shops for General repairs.

Henry Habbert, janitor at Master Mechanic Morse's office, resumed work this morning, having returned from St Louis

G. F. Horstmeyer and E O Pulle of the Wabash shops, were off duty yesterday, attending the funeral of a friend

Wabash engine No 471 is undergoing repairs in the shop. Engine 44 left the shops this morning, after being repaired.

The local freight business of the Big Four road at Indianapolis amounted to the handsome sum of $3 500,000 for the year 1894.

The express business on the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road is being handled by the United States Express company

J. L. Flynn is acting as foreman of the Wabash shops at Andrews, vice J. H McClure, retired, to take a passenger run on the road

Fireman S. Lett was taken sick at Crestline yesterday and was compelled to "dead head" home on No. 9. His ailment is not serious.

General Freight and Passenger Agent Russell, of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road, is in the city today. His offices are in Findlay

O J. Pond was in the city this morning. He is now holding a clerical position with the Lake Shore company at Toledo, but retains his residence at New Haven.

The empty car movement westward is increasing It is now time that some of these cars are beginning on their return trip, loaded with grain. Traffic is still very light.

C. W Bedson, Nickel Plate round house clerk, is still off duty, being unable to wear a shoe upon his injured foot A few days ago he fell and sprained one of his ankles.

The Baltimore and Ohio and the Pittsburg and Western are to put on a fast freight line independent of other lines, between Chicago and New York, the trains to be run on fast schedules

Bob Burns, engine inspector in the Pittsburg round house, bears the destinction of being the only man on the Pittsburg pay rolls at this place who worked every day in the year 1894, including Sundays

Mrs. William Hill, wife of the Nickel Plate weighmaster, was summoned to Grand Rapids yesterday by a telegram which stated that her aunt, Mrs. Mallary, was very sick. The sick lady is seventy-six years old.

C. W. Murphy has been appointed traveling passenger agent for the Southern Pacific railway, for the southeastern states. He was formerly connected with the southern railway as its representative in this territory.

George Pohl, of 36 Buchanan street, a carpenter employed in the Pennsylvania car shops, was stricken with paralysis on Lafayette street last evening, while en route from his work. Dr. J. E. Miller attended the unfortunate man.

Sparks from a Pittsburg passenger engine, pulling out of the round house yesterday afternoon, set fire to the cupola. The volunteer fire department, composed of shopmen, were called and speedily extinguished the flames. No damage was done.

Monroeville citizens are jubilant over the prospects of another railroad reaching that place. They claim that a line from the Ohio coal fields to connect with the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western, is to be constructed and that it will pass through Monroeville.

Jacob Workman, an employe of the electric light works, lost two fingers of his right hand yesterday. He was operating a punch machine when his hand accidentally slipped into the machine with the above result. Dr. Stemen dressed the hand He resides at 161 Hayden street

Nickel Plate Passenger Conductor T. E. Harper has resigned and A E Urbahns has been promoted from the freight service to the place vacated by Mr. Harper. Ed Gregg, a freight conductor, is also in line of promotion and is now out learning the duties of a passenger conductor.

A shed in the rear of the Standard wheel works and near the Bass blacksmith shop, was discovered to be ablaze at 1 o'clock this morning The department was called out and soon extinguished the flames. Loss, about $75. Manager Crim, of the wheel works, thinks that the fire originated from a spark from a switch engine

J. Tillotson, a fireman on the Grand Rapids road, met with a painful accident at Grand Rapids yesterday. The engine had been taking water and the trap door had accidentally been left open. The unfortunate man accidentally stepped into the opening and was badly strained. Medical assistance was procured for him in Grand Rapids, and another fireman secured.

The Indianapolis Journal says: "A railroad man of prominence and who is known to be generally correct in his predictions expresses the opinion that within the next five years the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy system will be controlled by the Pennsylvania Railway company, the Pennsylvania lines east of St Louis and Chicago to be the eastern division of the great system and those west of points named the western system."

The Pittsburg furnished a special train for the accommodation of the "Welsh singers," who wished to attend the festival at Columbus, Ohio The train left Van Wert this morning and ran to Upper Sandusky, picking up excursionists en route Thence the train ran to Columbus over the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo road.

HOTEL BURNED.

The Miller House, at Lexington, Destroyed.

Edward Pascoe, Mrs. Masters and a Two-Year-Old Child Perish in the Flames.

LANCASTER, Ky., Jan 1—The Miller hotel was burned between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning. There were four persons in the building at the time, Edward A. Pascoe and wife, his baby, about two years of age, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Masters. The wife only escaped. The fire started in the cellar, where it must have been smoldering all night, as the Pascoe's were about suffocated when awakened

The husband assisted his wife to the window and returned to assist his mother-in-law and babe, but was not able to return. No other persons were in the hotel, which had been conducted by Pascoe, and he had made all arrangements to give it up to day, having moved his furniture out of the building.

Pascoe was twenty-six years of age and came from Nicholasville, Ky. Mrs. Masters was a widow. The building was a three story brick, belonging to Sam Miller, of Knoxville, Tenn, and was insured for $5,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

SEVENTEEN DEAD.

Such is the Appalling List of the Victims of the Delavan Hotel Fire.

ALBANY, N. Y, Jan. 1—Although seventeen persons, all attaches of the house, are supposed to be in the ruins of the Delavan hotel, no attempt has been made to search the ruins, for the whole mass is still so hot that work is impossible Chief Higgins, of the fire department, says: "I don't know how many persons perished in the fire, but of their remains not even a bone will be found, for in my opinion every victim must have been completely incinerated" Up to 11 o'clock none of the persons reported missing has been located.

The purity and goodness of Dr. Price's Baking Powder are household words.

BISHOP KNICKERBACKER.

Death of the Episcopal Prelate at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 1.—Rt. Rev David Buell Knickerbacker, D. D, bishop of the diocese of Indiana, died last evening of pneumonia

He was born at Schaghticoke, Rensselaer county, N. Y., Feb. 24, 1833. He was the youngest son of Hermon Knickerbacker, widely known as "Prince Knickerbacker." He is alluded to by Washington Irving as "My cousin, the congressman," and when Mr. Irving visited Washington he introduced him to President Madison as 'My cousin, Diedrich Knickerbacker, the great historian of New York"

Bishop Knickerbacker entered Trinity college, Hartford, Conn, and graduated from there in 1853. He entered the general theological seminary in New York city and remained there three years. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Potter in Trinity church, New York, in June, 1856, and immediately went to Minneapolis, Minn., as a missionary, officiating there for the first time Dec. 7, 1856. He was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Kemper, in Gethsemane church, Minneapolis, July 13, 1857. Minneapolis at this time was a hamlet, with a population of about 200. In 1877 Dr. Knickerbacker was elected missionary bishop of Arizona and New Mexico, which election he declined

He was elected third bishop of Indiana in June, 1883, and on October 14 following, in St. Mark's church, Philadelphia, he was consecrated.

THE NEW AND THE OLD

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE ON THE LESSONS OF THE DAY.

He Suggests Turning Back Old Leaves Instead of Turning Over New—The New Year Fetich—A Fitting Present—A Welcome Call.

The old year is dead Long live the new! Jan 1 is not materially different from any other day of the year, but it seems the more important because it appeals to our hope and our imagination

Such hosts of people have a kind of superstition concerning Jan 1 that it might be called, as April 1 is, All Fools' day

The greatest "call" ever made in the western hemisphere was not on Jan 1, but on Oct 12, 1492, when Columbus discovered a new world

An old proverb says, "What you are on New Year's day you will always be" This, in a sense, is true, but it is equally true of any other day

Nature would seem to be opposed to the custom of calling on New Year's, since she generally makes the day very unpleasant, as if to discourage the practice

The Romans dedicated January to the god Janus who was represented as two faced To be two faced is to be hypocritical. Did they intend to intimate, satirical rogues, that the people who made visits, exchanged presents and good wishes were insincere and double dealing?

An analytic New Yorker, who used to make it a duty to pay social visits on Jan 1, when such visits were in vogue, arose one New Year's morning determined to "call on his friends" The phrase set his analytic faculties in motion and he concluded that he had but one friend So he staid at home and called on himself

The most fitting present perhaps we could make on New Year's would be to give the devil his due

The old Romans named the presents exchanged on New Year's strenæ, whose derivative meaning is strength If we could only give strength on this day to our weak fellow mortals, what a blessing it would be to them and to us and all the world!

Strenia was a Roman goddess who, according to Augustine, gave cheerfulness to work and also presided over New Year's presents If any goddess could give cheerfulness to work in this discontented age, how many statues we should raise to her and how zealously we should invoke her influence!

This is the day when many of us who perceive that we have committed various follies and are generally derelict to our obligations believe that we ought to turn over a new leaf We do turn it over repeatedly, but if we examine the new leaves impartially we will find that they are no improvement on the old This is likely to irritate us and to make us think that we do about as well as we can anyhow We are all inclined to believe when our will is weak that circumstances have conspired against us It is astonishing how much we help circumstances

Turning over a new leaf is usually little else than making promises to ourselves that we never keep

We forget at each recurrence of the New Year that it will soon be the old year, and that at its close most of what we meant to do will still remain undone

New Year's is a day when most of us hastily review the previous 12 months with an ardent prejudice in our own favor We decide, on the whole, that we have been pretty good fellows, readily forgetting or explaining our errors of omission and commission But such slight infringements as we have made of morals and rectitude we resolve to correct, and we are so satisfied with our resolve that we seldom attempt to alter our conduct at all

If a man, instead of turning over a new leaf on New Year's, would turn back some of the old leaves on any day, read them without bias and take them to heart, he would become stronger and better.

The majority of us make a fetich of New Year's. We decorate it with crimson patches of vain regrets and tawdy rags of hollow repentance and declare ourselves reformed.

Everything new appeals to us as opposed to and different from the old And we naturally, though unwisely, expect from the New Year what the old has not brought, unconscious that the new will not bring it either

The fact that every people from the ancient Egyptians down to the practical Americans have either worshiped or observed New Year's is merely added evidence that the whole human family lives on hope. Hope is a divinity enshrined in every heart, whose very pulsations depend on such enshrinement

It is not strange that the citizens of this republic have looked with dissatisfaction and disfavor on 1894, one of the hardest, gloomiest, most disastrous years in our recent history. We have reason this time to welcome New Year's as the harbinger of better days, as an earnest of prosperity and content It is entirely safe to say that 1895 cannot be worse than its predecessor

Since people have ceased to make calls on this day they remain at home, they declare, and get acquainted with their own families If they should get better acquainted with themselves, it might be well, but it would scarcely add to their gratification

Instead of talking today about turning over a new leaf, which must be by this time a pretty old leaf, we should perform some act of kindness, some deed of humanity One such performance is worth a thousand promises

To begin the year with uniform courtesy and consideration for every one with whom we come in contact is the fittest observation of the ever welcome day

If we would all try to do what little good we can for those more unfortunate than ourselves, the New Year would be better than our most sanguine expectations depict it

The old year is always as much discredited and condemned as the New Year is overrated and idealized

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE

Puritans Worked on New Year's.

The sole record of the observance of the New Year by the Pilgrims in the new world named New England was most prosaic, most brief, "We went to work betimes" Many of the good Puritan ministers thought the celebration or even notice of the day in any way savored of improper and un-Christian reverence for the heathen god Janus Yet these English settlers came from a land where New Year's eve and New Year's day were second in importance and in domestic observance only to Christmas Throughout every English county New Year's eve was always celebrated, in many it was called by the pretty name of Singing e'en from the custom which obtained of singing the last of the Christmas carols at that time

Thought He Had a Case.

It was full 2 o'clock in the morning as the policeman passed along a quiet residence street and found a limp and listless specimen of manhood sitting on a doorstep with his head in his hands

"What are you doing here at this time of night?" asked the officer shaking him

"Just what I was an hour ago," mumbled the man

"What's that?"

"Waitin' fr you."

"What do you want with me?"

"Want you to 'rest my wife"

"Where is she?"

"Inside there"

"What has she done?"

"She won't lemme in"

"How do you know she won't?"

PIXLEY & CO.

"Stuck her head out of the winder and told me so when I first come"

"I can't arrest her unless there is a charge against her."

"Can't you make one?"

"Of course I can't You'll have to do that yourself"

The man braced up at this information and a gleam of hope shone in his face

"Well" he said thickly "put a charge of breach of promise against her."

"How can you do that?" inquired the astonished officer "Isn't she your wife?"

"Course she is"

"Then you can't bring a charge of breach of promise against her."

This time the man began to rub his eyes as if he wanted to see a little better.

"I'd like to know why I can't?" he asked "Didn't she promise to love me in sickness and in health when she married me, and do you call it lovin a man when a woman keeps him sittin out on a pair of cold steps in the night air, and him in the condition I'm in? Course you don't So you just run her in on a breach of promise charge, and I'll stand by you f'ever and a day"

But the officer wouldn't —Detroit Free Press

Victimized.

"If I live long enough," he said moodily, "I hope I'll get over being a natural mark for any bunko steerer that happens to be loose"

"What's the matter?"

"I concluded I'd have to economize, so I sent 50 cents to a man who said that was all he'd charge to tell me how to make a little money go a long way"

"And what did he tell you?"

He simply wrote, 'Send 5 cents by express to San Francisco'"—Washington Star

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. This being a legal holiday, all the saloons in the city were closed There was some selling going on, but it was done on the sly. No drunken men and boys were seen on our streets and the day was just what the first day of the year should be.

One of the handsomest menus of the season seen at the city hotels is that of the New Year's dinner at the Randall. It is hand painted in gold and the centerpiece is a beautiful likeness of Dick Townsend's little son, Bert, who has an unusually bright and pretty face.

Will Kyburz, who for the past three years has been assistant secretary at the Y. M C A., has resigned his position and will spend the next two weeks with his brother in the country. After that time he has not exactly decided what line of work he will follow, having two or three offers under consideration. He is an excellent young man and has made many friends since he has resided in Fort Wayne Mr. Kyburz's place at the Y. M. C. A. has not yet been filled.

A misunderstanding, which came near ending in a rough and tumble fight, occurred at the Wabash Union station this morning. The American Express company, up to last night, handled the express business on the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road The contract expired with the old year and the railway people let the express contract to the United States company The American company's agent refused to turn the business over and force was used in ejecting the messenger from the car The patrol was summoned, but before the police reached the scene the matter was settled The United States company won for the time being.

NEW YEARS DAY

Appropriately Observed at the Capitol.

President and Mrs. Cleveland Receive Calls,

Assisted By the Ladies of the Cabinet.

The Guests and the Gowns Worn.

Senators, Representatives, Judges, Army Officers and Distinguished Men and Women Call.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Probably in no other city of the country does that peculiarly American custom of exchanging New Year's calls continue to flourish with the same vigor as in the capital of the nation. Although in other cities the custom has come to be more regarded in the breach than in the observance, in Washington everybody in official life either receives or pays calls. The president himself set the fashion in this matter and naturally the white house is the focus of interest on the first day of the new year, for there is congregated the most distinguished persons in the land in official life, and the most attractive conditions.

The ceremonies of the day began at 11 o'clock, but long before that hour a great throng of people, considering the state of the whether, had gathered at the entrance to the white house grounds to peep into the carriages as they rolled through the gates laden with pretty women and distinguished statesmen, and gorgeously attired members of the diplomatic corps. Within the grounds policemen were properly stationed to guide the visitors and preserve order.

The old white house had been thoroughly prepared for the day's ceremonies. Outside a canopy had been erected for the protection of the guests who came in carriages. On the inside canvass covers had been laid carefully to prevent the destruction of the rich carpets by the trampling of thousands of feet which were to pass over them.

As in the past year the decorations of the rooms were all floral, but there was a noticeable difference from the plan of last year in the free use of potted plants and palms in place of the great banks of cut flowers which formerly graced the room. Consequently there was something lacking in the color, but form an artistic post of view, this was more than compensated for by the beauty of the growing plants neatly arranged in pure white jardinniers, of basket work design.

The guests entered at the main door of the mansion and crossing the lobby, passed into the red room, where they had an opportunity to divest themselves of their wraps and coats before entering the blue room, where the reception party was stationed. Two heavy couches had been so arranged across the room as to leave a small open space in the center, thus shielding the president, the mistress of the white house and her servants from the long line of callers.

The blue room, always the prettiest of the white house suite, was beautifully decorated with flowers, a star shaped white blossom prevailing in such profusion as to charmingly subdue the all-prevalent blue tint of the artificial decorations and furnishings. In the lobby just within the main doorway was stationed the full marine band, making a gallant show in their brilliant scarlet uniforms and discoursing with splendid effect a specially arranged program of artistic merit.

The music began with a grand inaugural march by Fanciulli, the leader of the band, followed by selections from the band and closing with the national anthems.

The first to arrive at the executive mansion were the ladies of the cabinet, who were to assist Mrs. Cleveland in receiving. They were ushered up stairs, where they removed their wraps, and were greeted by Mrs. Cleveland.

The reception was to begin at 11 o'clock and at that hour president and Mrs. Cleveland came down stairs, followed by the cabinet ladies and other guests who were to stand behind the line. The Marine band struck up the inaugural march as the receiving party proceeded to the room in this order: Colonel Wilson with Lieutenant Gilmore, then the president and Mrs. Cleveland, and then the members of the cabinet with their ladies. They entered the blue room and for a few moments there was a general exchange of the compliments of the season between the persons in the room.

Mrs. Cleveland was attired in white moire antique, heavily embroidered with silver, and with full sleeves.

Her mother, Mrs. Perrin, wore a heliotrope velvet gown, ornamented with the silver passamenterie.

Mrs. Gresham wore a gown of black and white satin. Black formed the most of the skirt, which was bordered with white satin, and this material also formed the sleeves.

Mrs. Carlisle wore gray moire antique trimmed with sable and passamenterie.

Mrs. Lamont was in buttercup satin elegantly brocaded in white with a lace patern. Brown velvet and lace formed a becoming collarette finish.

Mrs. Bissell wore white satin brocade with a waist in a fluffy effect of white chiffon trimmed with pearl and silver passamentries.

Miss Herbert was in a light blue satin richly brocaded in pink and finely plaited chiffon frills on the bodice.

Mrs. Olney wore purple bengaline richly embroiderred and trimmed with lace.

Miss Morton wore a toilete of black and white striped moire and brocade with point lace.

Mrs. Hoke Smith, being in poor health, did not take part in the reception.

A number of ladies, including the wives and daughters of prominent officials and personal friends of Mrs. Clevland, had been invited to take positions behind the line with the receiving party, so that there was a brilliant array of handsome costumes in the room.

These ladies were: Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. Schofield, Mrs. Casey, Mrs. Thurber, Mrs. McAdoo, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Ramsey, Mrs. Chadwick, Mrs. Heywood, Mrs. Walsh, (Georgia). Mrs. Sherman, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Crisp, Miss Bertha Crisp, Miss Inez Ferder, Mrs. Cockran, Mrs. Strauss, Mrs. Catchings, Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Henderick, Miss Murphy, Miss Voorhees, Mrs. Maxwell, Mrs. Bowler, Mrs. Eckels, Miss Curtis, the Misses Hamlin, Mrs. Uhl, Miss Kennedy, Miss Mabel Johnson, Miss Nannie Leiter, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. W. J. Carlisle, Mrs. Bradder, Miss Queen, Miss Helmur.

The program had been arranged, as is customary, for the admission of the different classes of officials in the order of their rank, usually the vice president is the first to pay his respects to the president, but this year Mr. Stevenson is south on account of the illness of his daughter.

The first callers were the members of the cabinet, then came the diplomatic corps, the judges of the various courts, senators and representatives, officers of the army, and various other officials, old soldiers and distinguished men in all ranks.

The secretary of state and Mrs. Gresham received the diplomatic corps at the Arlington hotel from 12:30 to 1, and other callers afterwards. Mrs. Gresham was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Andrews, of Chicago; Mrs. Capt. Fuller, her neice, and other ladies.

Mrs. Carlisle received assisted by Mrs. Wm K. Carlisle, Miss Quessant Miss Heolm, of Covington, and other ladies.

Mrs. Lamont, Mrs. Bissel, Mrs. Olney, Miss Morton and Miss Herbert also received callers.

MAD FROM POLITICS!

Daniel Trombly Murdered His Wife and Child

And Then He Set Fire to His Home and Made Good His Escape.

BAY CITY, Mich., Jan. 1.—Daniel J. Trombley, a lumber inspector twenty-eight years of age, crazed over politics, murdered his wife and child this morning, set fire to the house and made his escape.

The murder was first discovered by the firemen who found Mrs. Trombley with her throat cut lying on the bed burned almost to a crisp. The child had evidently been smothered, as no marks were found upon it.

Trombley ran on and independent ticket for county clerk at the late election, canvassing the entire county and making wild speeches.

FEE AND SALARY LAW.

Attorney General Wants it Purged of Unconstitutional Features.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1.—Attorney General Ketchum has filed suit in the circuit court, in which Governor Matthews is made the relater, praying that the fee and salary law of 1891 be purged of its unconstitutional features and be restored to the form in which it passed the legislature. The complaint says that the law was regularly passed, and that it then contained salaries for each of the officers in Shelby county; that the senate made amendments to the bill, and when those amendments were rejected by the house a conference was held in which the senate receded from some of its amendments and the house acceded to others; that the bill as introduced, amended and engrossed, contained provisions for each of the offices, but when it was delivered to the secretary of state for filing and custody one of the sections had been so changed that no provision appeared for the offices of treasurer, recorder and auditor of Shelby county. He says that this ommission was made either through fraud or carelessness, but he is unable to determine which. All the clerks and others who had anything to do with the bill after it passed will be called as witnesses and it is expected to show that the change was made through corrupt means. It is intimated that the attorney general has information which will create a sensation when it comes out.

Three cans of the cheap baking powders are required to go as far as one of Dr. Price's.

MRS. AMELIA J. BLOOMER.

The Earliest Advocate of Woman's Dress Reform Dead.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Amelia J. Bloomer, wife of D. C. Bloomer, died at Council Bluffs yesterday. She was one of the earliest advocates of national dress for women and her public use of the new costume caused it to be called the Bloomer costume. She was seventy-seven years old and a native of Homer, N. Y. She was married in 1840 and issued "The Lily," a woman suffrage paper, from 1849 to 1853. She came to Council Bluffs about twenty-five years ago. She attained a national reputation as a lecturer and advocate of woman suffrage and temperance.

SUPPRESS ROBY.

Stringent Measures for the Legislature to Consider.

The Texts of Three Bills Which Will be Submitted—Message of Governor Matthews.

VALPARAISO, Ind., Jan. 1.—Last night Circuit Judge John B. Gillett sent to Governor Matthews the texts of three bills which are proposed to be submitted to the coming legislature of Indiana. They relate to prize fighting and horse racing with a view to remedy past and existing evils, especially Roby fighting and racing. Roby is in Judge Gillett's jurisdiction.

One bill makes more prespicuous what a prize fight is and defines it very closely; another bill makes a felony, a penitentiary offence, of fighting, sparring or boxing for a prize, or for fighting, sparring or boxing where fifty persons pay for admission.

Another bill prohibits horse racing for prizes or paid admissions between November 1st and April 15th, or at any time during the year for over thirty days out of the fifty days. In case of violation of this act, if the local civil authorities do not stop the racing the governor is given power, not now possessed by him, in certain ways of enforcing the laws. Minute procedure for an injunction is given in the act.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1.—Governor Matthews has written that part of his message touching upon the Roby question. He said that he had made some very strong recommendations which, if acted upon, would result in the suppression of Robyism in the state. In fact, he said he had handled Roby without gloves. A few weeks ago he had some correspondence with Judge Gillette, of Lake county, and informed the judge that he would be thankful for any suggestion which he or any other competent citizen might make. He did not know that Judge Gillette was preparing suggestions in the form of a bill to be introduced in the legislature, but he hoped such was the case.

AN OLD PRACTICE.

Indiana Treasurers Have Been in the Habit of Loaning State Money.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1.—The failure of Treasurer Gall, through the loss of $65,000 of state money in the Indianapolis National bank, is causing a great deal of comment, and in connection with it there has come to light the practice of such officers of loaning money to the banks and thus evading the law.

It appears that the money was loaned to the bank and a certificate of deposit was issued to Haughey and by Haughey indorsed and turned over to the treasurer. In this transaction the latter's name did not appear upon the bank's books and no investigation could have shown that he was lending the state's money. Before the bank failed Gall secured notes as collateral and when the receiver took charge he found these notes had been taken from the bank. The parties who gave them were notified to call at the Union Trust company and pay them, and by this means the receiver learned where the notes were and under what circumstances they had left the bank, and he demanded their return. After consulting attorneys the notes were returned and Gall was left with no evidence of the indebtedness but the certificate indorsed by Haughy, and he is compelled to share the loss with the general depositors.

It is said that Gall followed a practice which has been general among state treasurers and which was designed to cover up the fact that they were violating the law which forbids the lending of money.

HUNG BY A MOB.

Kentucky Begins the Year With a Lynching Bee.

Tom Blair Taken From Jail and Hung to a Railroad Trestle.

MT. STERLING, Ky., Jan. 1.—About 2 o'clock this morning a mob of twenty-five men went to the county jail, overpowered Jailer Best, secured the keys and took from the jail Tom Blair, of Morgan county, and hung him to a railroad trestle in the city limits.

Blair fought desperately for his life, and was beaten into almost insensibility before he was hung.

Blair was one of the parties who assisted in killing Captain J. L. Bomar in this city last February. He was cleared of the charge and was in jail for shooting with intent to kill a few days ago. It is supposed that friends of Bomar were the lynchers.

MARRIED TODAY.

Captain Charles E. Reese Married at Indianapolis.

This afternoon, at the home of her sister, Mrs. L. F. Bockhoff, of 15 Woodruff place, Indianapolis Captain Charles E. Reese was united in marriage to Miss Louise, the pleasant and attractive daughter of C. F. Gehnke, of Tacoma, Wash.

The young lady is favorably known in Fort Wayne society, and tomorrow Captain Reese and his bride will arrive in the city and be at home with his parents, at No. 131 Montgomery street, while his home is in course of preparation. The news is quite a surprise and THE SENTINEL extends hearty congratulations to the young couple, both of whom have hosts of friends in this city.

The Fort Wayne mail carriers will get [illegible] back pay for overtime.

Sunday evening a crowd of young people gathered at the home of Miss Jessie Rapine, 30 Hough street, in honor of her guest, Miss Nora Bryant, of Peru, Ind. The evening was spent in music and games. Miss Bryan will leave for her home Wednesday.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Carrie Gale Henderson to Mr. Fred H. Pageler, jr. The wedding which takes place on the 10th of this month, will be held at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Henderson, No. 10 Madison street.

The third New Year's watch meeting of the M. H. club was held last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stone, on East Wayne street. There were about forty persons in attendance and it was morning before the watchers departed for their homes. All had a most enjoyable time.

Last evening, at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gruber, of East Hough street, was held a watch party. The evening was spent in games, dancing and music and at 12 o'clock an elaborate supper was served in five courses. The host and hostess are royal entertainers and did ample justice to the large crowd present.

Miss Constance Heller, of West Williams street, entertained a number of her friends with a New Years mistletoe party last evening. Cards and games were indulged in. Those present were: Messrs. John Moring, Arch Bradly, Sam Stringer, James Gould, E. Muhler, and Misses Grace Monahan, Mary Sullivan, Anna O'Rourke, Grace Webber and Constance Heller.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Scheiman, of East Williams street, last evening very pleasantly entertained about sixty-five of their friends with a watch meeting. The host and hostess are the most hospitable of entertainers and it is needless to say that the guests spent a very enjoyable evening. The supper served at 12 o'clock was an elaborate one.

A watch meeting was held at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. McConnell, of West Superior street. Cards, music, etc., were the features of the evening and at midnight a delightful supper was served in four courses. Those present were Messrs. and Mesdames C. H. Rekers, jr., R. C. Chamberlain, J. L. McConnell, Misses Mamie Rekers, Eva Chamberlain, of Portland, and Mr. D. E. Kelly, of Muncie, Ind.

Last evening Miss Grace Jackson, assisted by Miss Grace Harding, entertained with a watch party at the home of Miss Jackson, on Fairfield avenue. The guests were delightfully entertained with progressive games. Supper was served late. Among the guests were Misses Florence Barrett, De Etta Davis, Daisy Davis, Carrie Harper, Maud Sperry, Jeanette Humphrey, Elna Hire, Mable Lawson, Nellie Nonnamaker, Lillie Wilding, Mamie Walton, Vera Morgan, Charlotte Grimes, Pearl Foster, Laura Bradley, Messrs. Joe Barsley, Philip Bursley, Frank Davis, Donald McDonald, John Stahl, Fred Shoaff, Joe Hamilton, Charles and Percy Olds, Walter Grimm, Guy Bell, Alfred Cressler, Charles and Ralph Bond.

This evening at the homes of Miss Minnie Hoffman and the Misses Lumbard, the second entertainment of the series will be given by the Dinner Dancing club. Miss Hoffman will be assisted by Miss Seabrease and will entertain Misses Carnahan, Ninde, Moffat and Woodworth and Messrs. B. P. Ninde, M. W. Fay, W. W. Atterbury, H. W. Rockhill, P. F. Smith, John Morris. Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Hoffman chaperone the party. At the Misses Lumbard's the guests will be Miss Alice Ward, Miss Bass, Miss Knight and Messrs. E. H. Carnahan, Eugene Olds, Frank Morse, Ed Woodworth, W. M. Ninde, Frank Lumbard, Alexander Seabrease and will be chaperoned by Mrs. R. T. McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Lumbard. At both dinners the tables will be done in pink with roses and carnations. A dance program of several numbers at the Fort Wayne club will follow the dinner.

At Miss Kate Hoffman's home on West Berry street last evening a number of guests gathered to watch the old year out and welcome the new one. The house was beautifully decorated with carnations and marguerites arranged artistically in vases and over mantels. The floors were canvassed for dancing and at 12 o'clock the New Year was danced in with the Virginia Reel. The earlier hours of the evening were devoted to cards. Supper of several courses was served at 11 o'clock. The guests were Misses Valette and Emma Rurode, Bessie Knight, Helen Knight, Irma Seavey, Anna Bond, Charlotte Lowry, Haidie Tyler, Jessie Sale, Ethel Hanna, Margie Hanna, Sadie Rockhill, Emily Hoffman, Messrs. Fred Kolloch, Allan Hamilton, Taber Hamilton, Walter Williams, Frank Lumbard, Fred Peters, Brooke Sale, Warren Wyneken, Wade and Arthur Thayer, Fred Hoffman.

The social evening held by the Unity club on the last day of 1894 was a most enjoyable affair and the guests who had been invited to the 6 o'clock dinner served at the home of Mrs. John W. Sale were most delightfully entertained. The tables were very prettily decorated in the club colors, two shades of yellow, and the name cards were of corn husks daintily painted. Between the courses of the dinner literary conundrums were propounded and a prize was awarded to the most successful in guessing the author's name. Miss Kent, of St. Mary's, Ohio, who is visiting Mrs. A. L. Gribel, was the guest of honor and carried off the prize. The members of the club and their guests were Messrs. and Mesdames G. D. Crane, J. K. McCracken, E. F. Yarnelle, John W. Hayden, S. B. Hartman, J. W. Sale, Mesdames M. E. Mayhew, W. E. McGrath, Martha Melsheimer, A. L. Griebel, D. L. Harding, M. A. Eskin, Misses Ellen Spencer, of Indianapolis; Mary Kent, of St. Mary's, Ohio, Emma Jenkinson.

The initial entertainment given by The Thirteen last evening at the home of Miss Yarnelle, on West Wayne street, was very charming in all its appointments, and right merrily was the old year danced out and the new one in by the club and their guests. The house was prettily decorated with holly, mistletoe and evergreen effectively arranged. The dance program was in charge of a mandolin orchestra and the number of favor dances interspersed made it exceedingly pleasing. At 11 o'clock a delicious collation of salads, ices and coffee was served. The patronesses were Mesdames E. F. Yarnelle, A. J. Laubach and Cash Miller. The club and their guests were Misses Lavon Sperry, Julia Romsey, Lula Laubach, Emma Ash, Mary Moffat, Edith Yarnelle, Mary Shoaff, Lillian Ash, Bessie McCracken, Maud Harrison, Gertrude Mayhew, Jean McLachlan, Messrs. R. G. Nonnamaker, Hugh Keegan, H. C. Crane, Clarence Swann, Weatherhogg, Will Wood, Nathan Snyper, L. C. Gauter, of Akron, Ohio; Fred McCracken, Ralph Yarnelle, Sam Moffat, C. W. Talmage, Charles Stringer, Robert Robertson.

The condemning of alum as an unwholesome ingredient in baking powders by the government authorities as well as by physicians generally, has not deterred manufacturers of such powders from foisting them on an unsuspecting public. Following is a partial list of the alum powders found in the stores.

"Calumet," "Chicago Yeast," "Kenton," "Grant's Bon Bon," "Hotel," "Taylor's One Spoon," "Climax," "Snow Puff," "Snow Ball," "Giant," "Milk," "Crown," "Unrivaled," "Silver Star," "Davis' O. K.," "Forest City," "Monarch," "K. C.," "Loyal," "Manhattan," "Crystal," "Hatchet," "Home," "Echo," "Perfection," "Rocket," "Town Talk," "Imperial," "White Rose," etc.

It is safe to reject all brands sold with a prize. All powders sold at twenty-five cents or less a pound are sure to be made of alum. Dr. Wiley, the government chemist, in his official examination of baking powders at the World's Fair, threw out all "alum powders," classing them as unwholesome.

Morton Inaugurated.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Levi P. Morton was inaugurated as governor of New York at noon today. The ceremony was [illegible] simple.

A GENUINE FREAK.

One of the Most Remarkable Cases on Record.

A Fort Wayne Kleptomaniac Steals Over Three Thousand Separate Articles in About Four Years.

The longer the Fort Wayne police examine into the case of Peter Deutschmann, of No. 90 East Lewis street, the more convinced are they that they have the biggest freak who was ever behind the bars at the police station. All day yesterday the officers were busy sorting over the plunder which was taken from the barn in the rear of Deutschmann's home. During the day hundreds of persons called at the station to look for missing articles. Anyone who has missed anything in Fort Wayne during the past four years can likely locate it now by going to the station house. The plunder includes no less than 3000 separate articles. The kleptomaniac seemed to be a genuine magnet and never went out of his own home but what he attracted something loose and carried it off. Among the articles at the station were telegraph instruments, patent medicines, beer pumps, watches, shoemakers' lasts, surgeon's instruments, part of Geary's museum, electrotypes, rubber garden hose, shingles, lath, lumber, door locks, several hundred keys, hundreds of articles stolen from the Pennsylvania Railway company, besides hundreds and hundreds of other articles of a list which would fill a newspaper. If the whole load of plunder was put up at auction it would not bring $50, and yet there is several hundred dollars' worth of plunder if estimated at first cost. Among the articles was a lot of prayer books, so that the man likely never went to church without stealing a book of some kind. The thief had a habit of carrying a satchel with him whenever he went away from home. When arrested he had this with him, and upon examination the officers found a fine $30 injector for a steam engine, besides some valuable tools. Curiously enough the Pennsylvania officials considered the man one of their best and most honest employes. Deutschmann, however, seems to have been a genuine Dr. Jekill and Mr. Hyde, and his true character has been suspected by neighbors, who were afraid of the fellow as he was thought to be a thief, and was also said to be a dangerous anarchist.

The fellow was seen at the jail last evening by THE SENTINEL reporter. Deutschmann is not an unintelligent looking fellow; but he has a bad face and an experienced eye would put him down as a freak of some kind. He said he came to America about seven years ago and was married in Fort Wayne two years later. Upon being asked where he got all the things found in his barn the fellow got very angry and saucy. He said he bought every one of them.

PIONEER FIDDLERS.

Twenty Veterans Wrestle With "Rye Straw" at Columbus, Ind.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Jan. 1.—The most novel entertainment ever given in this city was a pioneer fiddling match gotten up by a daily paper and given in Crump's theater last night for the benefit of the poor of this city. The large theater was packed. William Waltman presided and made a pioneer talk. Ex Mayor Stader was master of ceremonies. Twenty fiddlers dressed in pioneer garb, ranging in age from sixty to eighty years, opened with a grand overture "The Pre- [illegible]." None but pioneer log cabin tunes of the most colonial days were played, such as "Leather Breeches," "Forked Deer," "Old Dan Tucker," etc. Each contestant was given a prize of five new Columbian half dollars. Two hundred and fifty dollars were realized for the poor.

KICKED IN THE DOOR.

Henry Hageman Bound Over to Keep the Peace.

Large Crowd at Police Court This Morning—New Year's Revelers Sent to Jail—Other Jottings.

There was a very large police court this morning, Mayor Oakley presiding.

The first case called was that of Thomas Hageman. Late last night Officer Summers, who was on Chicago street, heard a loud noise at the home of Mrs. Margaret Fry. Rushing over the officer found Hageman engaged in the playful sport of kicking in the front door. He had already succeeded in going through two panels and had succeeded in thoroughly terrifying the inmates. Hageman was placed under arrest and was tried this morning on the charge of surety of the peace. He plead not guilty and said that he had roomed with Mrs. Fry and did not see why he could not go into the house when he wanted to. Officer Summers testified that the prisoner had been locked up before and Mrs. Fry testified that the fellow had often threatened to do her bodily injury and that she was afraid of her life. Mayor Oakley bound Hagemen over to the circuit court in the sum of $100 and he went to jail.

SENTIMENT, BUT NOT SENSE.

Last night, at the south depot, Officers Paul and Stoll arrested a young vagrant, who gave several names and finally admitted that his right name was Masell. The boy could give no good account of himself and acted in a very suspicious manner. While the officers were making the arrest two of the actors of the d'Arville Opera company stepped up and interceded for the boy. Actors are proverbially tender hearted in some ways and Messrs. Boucicault and Shea, the two actors, meant well, but they spoilt it all by getting mad at the police. Going to the station house they offered to put up bail for the boy, but this was refused. This morning the boy plead not guilty to a charge of vagrancy, but was sent to jail in default of $5 and costs.

COMMON DRUNKS.

The common drunks who were on trial were: John Brown, John O'Connell, Charles Clancy, Charles Roempke and Jacob Sprowl. They were fined $1 and costs each.

HELD UP.

F. C. Hormann, employed by Charles Pape, was held up and robbed of his watch by two men at the corner of Main street, near Griffith, about 7 o'clock last evening. Hormann was stopped by two men, one of whom asked him something about a labor union. Hormann said he didn't know anything about it and the highwaymen slugged him on general principals. They took his watch and then ran. Hormann picked himself up and went to Hahn's saloon, where a little later the two men who had held him up appeared. Upon seeing their victim, they ran but later Officer Knook caught one of the fellows in Schele's saloon on Harrison street, where he was playing pool. The prisoner was taken to the police station, where the watch was found on his person.

At police court this morning the prisoner said his name was Frank McGill and that he was employed at Myer's livery stable and boarded at the Beyer's boarding house. He told an entirely different story from that told by Hormann. McGill said that Hormann was playing cards with a party of three fellows of which he (McGill) was one. After spending all their money for drinks Hormann said he still had his watch and could put that up. All three of the men went outside the saloon and in the fight which followed Hormann dropped his watch and McGill says he picked it up and intended keeping it for safety. The story, however, looked a trifle shaky and the mayor bound the prisoner over in the sum of $500. He went to jail.

CAR ROBBED.

Last night some hungry thieves broke open a car at the Lake Shore yards and stole a lot of quail, pheasants and other game. Two packages of tobacco were also taken.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

McCormick and Search's New Venture Meeting With Favor.

McCormick & Search's Temperance Billiard Hall, in the Aldine block, has been open for business for some days and is successful far beyond the expectations of the proprietors. The fact is rapidly being recognized that in this splendid hall may be found every comfort necessary to an enjoyable evening.

Mr. Search promises some rare surprises for his patrons in the near future.

SCROFULA *

Miss Delia Stevens of Boston, Mass., writes: I have always suffered from hereditary Scrofula, for which I tried various remedies, and many reliable physicians, but none relieved me. After taking six bottles of S.S.S. I am now well. I am very grateful to you, as I feel that it saved me from a life of untold agony, and shall take pleasure in speaking only words of praise for the wonderful medicine, and in recommending it to all.

THE SENTINEL wishes all its readers a Happy New Year.

Let every good resolution you have made be kept throughout the years to come.

WITH snow all around us, Fort Wayne remains "the one green spot in Indiana."

IT costs as much to govern New York now as it cost to govern the entire United States in 1861.

PEOPLE who live in the United States should avoid using Canadian silver. The laws of this country provide no penalty for counterfeiting them, and the manufacturers of queer feel comparatively safe in handling them.

THE political climate of Europe seems to be better adapted than that of this country to the production of grand old men. Gladstone was eighty-five Saturday. Bismarck will be eighty next April, and Leo XIII will be eighty-five in March. The nearest we can come to producing a grand old man is our old Roman, Allen G. Thurman.

NATURE is now fighting the battles of China better than she can, or at least better than she has done. A rigorous winter is a hard thing on the little fellows of sunny Japan. The campaign of the Japs amid the snows of northern China recall the sufferings of the French upon their disastrous retreat under Napoleon from Moscow after burning the Kremlin.

TAKEN altogether, it is safe to say that the exposures made by the Lexow investigating committee in New York are the most disgraceful and discouraging that the whole history of municipal corruption can show. It begins to look as though the biggest rascals on the force were promoted to the highest places, and that increased capacity for usefulness was exercised wholly in squeezing and protecting criminals, instead of bringing them to punishment.

IT is likely that horseless carriages will soon become comparatively common. They can be propelled by either steam or electricity. A machine somewhat of the bicycle pattern, driven by electricity, would be feasible certainly. Paris has at present a fad for carriages propelled without horses. Whether anything reasonable and useful will come of it is uncertain. There was lately a race of horseless vehicles from Paris to Rouen, which a steam carriage, belonging to Count de Dion, won by traveling 17½ miles an hour. It would not matter so much whether we had horseless carriages if we could only get horseless trucks and express wagons. These huge vehicles, thundering along with the reins held by ignorant, reckless drivers, are a perpetual danger to locomotion in the streets of a city. The drivers sometimes take a brutal delight in seeing how close they can come to a pedestrian without actually knocking him down. They dare not do that, but they take their revenge for this deprivation by frightening him as nearly to death as possible.

The Terrible Year.

Many people will be glad 1894 is over. In some respects it has been the most disastrous year within their experience. There is less actual suffering this winter than there was last, and we do not hear so much of the thousands of unemployed who must be fed by charity in the large cities. But it is not that work is plentiful yet. It is that everything has come down to the hardest kind of hardpan, and people are getting economizing to the last cent.

In our own country epidemics of typhoid fever, smallpox and diphtheria have raged with fury in many places. It is safe to say there have been more murders and suicides than were ever known in any one year before in the United States. The holding up and robbing of railway trains by armed desperadoes have prevailed to an unheard of extent. Even in the safest, quietest parts of the east the train robbing epidemic broke loose.

The country was kept in a state of turmoil many months—first by the coal miners' strike, then by the Pullman strike and the consequent riots, bloodshed and wrecking of property. Fires during 1894 have been unusually destructive to human and animal life. At a fire in Baltimore, on April 10, 130 horses were burned to death. In the destruction of the American Glucose works at Buffalo two days later 12 workmen lost their lives, and $1,200,000 worth of property went up in flame. How many people were burned to death in the awful forest fires in the northwest will never be known for certain. Whole towns were wiped from the face of the earth. It is certain that not less than 500 people perished in these fires, which themselves resulted from the most terrible drought this country has known in many years. Except a portion of the southern states, drought prevailed over nearly the whole United States.

The black plague in China early in the year swept off not less than 50,000 lives, according to the best information that can be obtained. Memorable, too, has 1894 been for terrible earthquakes. In February two such widely separated regions as Greece and Venezuela were visited by seismic disturbances, with heavy loss of life and the destruction of millions of property. In Venezuela two towns were annihilated. The shocks in Constantinople in July, while not so severe, were yet fatal to a number of lives. Early in November Sakata, a town on the northwest coast of Japan, experienced an earthquake shock from which it will take years to recover. Many houses and families were swallowed up bodily. Not less than 300 people were killed outright and 300 more severely wounded. The record closes with a violent and destructive earthquake in Hungary Dec. 19.

It is remarkable that when one of these convulsions of the earth's crust takes place in a given locality the tidal waves from it extend underground to countries far remote from the scene of the original disturbance. Nov. 16, not long after the cataclysm at Sakata, came the earthquake horrors in southern Italy, whereby in Sicily alone 100 persons were killed.

Nature seems indeed to have wreaked her vengeance on man in 1894. Besides the eastern war, which he brought about himself, she has visited upon him earthquake, plague, drought, fire and flood. The storms in the United States at least have been seldom excelled in fury and destructiveness. A tornado in Texas in March killed 16 persons and injured 30 more. A storm in May annihilated a million dollars' worth of property in Ohio, Michigan and some of the states westward. The months of May and June were signalized in various parts of the country by some of the most destructive storms ever known. Wherever they occurred they were peculiarly fatal to human life.

On the whole, if we have come through 1894 with enough to eat and wear and a shelter over our heads, if no awful griefs have bowed us down and we have fairly good health, then, really and truly, we have much to be thankful for at the beginning of 1895.

There is a promise that we shall have at last in one of the committee rooms of the United States senate some talk that is not about silver and the tariff. A resolution has been offered in that august body favoring the political union of the United States and Canada. The committee on foreign relations has charge of the resolution, and the senate recommended the committee to give hearings on the subject. If during these hearings the committee on foreign relations could only occupy the senate chamber, while the senate occupied the committee room, and if in addition the discussions of the question could be opened to the public while orators from both sides of the line were to be invited to say their say, it would be the most entertaining show that congress has offered to the public since a certain senator hoisted his stockinged feet upon his desk in plain sight of all the company.

At the close of 1894 cast up all your accounts, beg forgiveness for all your sins and make your good resolutions for 1895. Then stop fooling and go to work.

When a bank employee is known to bet on horse races or to speculate in stocks, it is safe to discharge him.

What a pity it is that there is a job for somebody in nearly everything!

Dyspeptics, naturally enough, are afraid of hot cake, biscuit, pastry, pie crust and muffins. Hot food may be eaten with impunity when made with Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

Diphtheria seems to be abating in Fort Wayne just now. According to Sanitary Officer Miller there are only nine cases of diphtheria in the city at the present time, and four of these are convalescing. There are only six cases of scarlet fever in the city.

A MODERN WOOING.

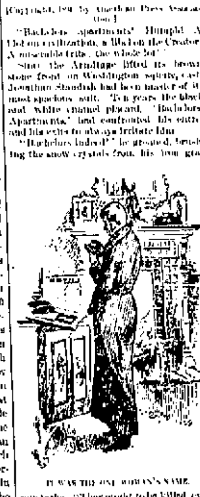
A NEW YEAR'S INCIDENT.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"Bachelors' apartments!" Humph! A libel on civilization, a libel on the Creator. A miserable trifle, the whole lot!"

Since the Armitage lifted its brown stone front on Washington square, east, Jonathan Standish had been master of its most spacious suit. Ten years the black and white enamel placard, "Bachelors' Apartments," had confronted his entries and his exits to always irritate him.

"Bachelors indeed!" he groaned, brushing the snow crystals from his iron gray mustache. "They ought to be killed, every mother's son of them—wiped off the face of the earth."



IT WAS THE ONE WOMAN'S NAME.

"Bad night, Mr. Standish."

"Beastly. Beastly."

"It's coming in like a lion."

The elevator stopped at the third floor. The dean of the Armitage's bon vivants alighted.

"What did you remark, Toby?"

"New Year's is coming like a lion, sir."

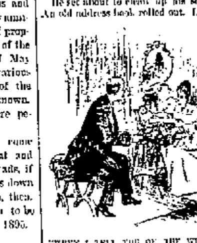
"Ah, yes. New Year's! Why, so it is. You're right, Toby. May it bring luck to you, my lad. God bless you."

Richer by a gold eagle, Toby descended in glee, while Standish crossed the threshold of his luxurious semblance of a home. A fire crackled brightly. Creature comforts were on every side, but the lord of the manor felt chilled. Was it the ominous silence, the pertinent placard in the vestibule or disappointment in not meeting a single boon companion at the club? Where were they? What was up?

It was New Year's eve. They were doubtless in the bosom of their families or the guest of honor in the home of a kindred, while he, Jonathan Standish, boy and man for 60 years in the metropolis, was without home, kith or kindred. More than one of his forefathers slept in Trinity churchyard. The stately house in Stuyvesant square where so many, many happy days of his boyhood had passed was long since relegated to a boarding house. And they were going—oh, so rapidly!—all the old familiar faces.

"Won't do, won't do," he muttered, slipping into his elder gown. Antagonistic to his taste and temperament was the life he led. He was the victim of a series of circumstances that he fancied he was powerless to have averted, and so his life had drifted. "Too late, too late!" Memory recalled what might have been, egotism what was yet possible. "All the good old fashioned women are gone. There's nothing left but that caricature, the new woman. Bah, with her ologies and her isms, her suffrage meetings and good government clubs! She is not only driving men from stores, offices and counting rooms, but, by George, she has robbed him of his coat, vest and four-in-hand, and now she wants his breeches!"

He set about to clean up his secretary. An old address book rolled out. Leisurely he turned the pages. The addresses smacked for the most part of the turf and the counting room.



"WHEN I TELL YOU OF THE WILD GOOSE CHASE YOU HAVE GIVEN ME."

"Miss Blackmore, 189 Broadway." It was the one woman's name in the little red book. Standish lit his pipe and drew up his chair to the open hearth.

"What a game of whist that woman plays! I wish she were here now. What a rubber we could have if Daniels and the captain would drop in! There's not a man at the club that can match her. There's a woman of horse sense! No new fangled notions about her!" And Standish's thoughts went back to Mrs. Vandyke's parlor at Manhattan. Mrs. Vandyke was a dilapidated society woman who resorted to summer boarders to replenish her coffers. Late in the season Standish chanced at her cottage, and the domesticity of the environment charmed him, and soon Standish was enrolled among the widow's most substantial guests.

The night of his arrival it rained incessantly. The guests were driven from the verandas to the parlor. Before Standish could escape Mrs. Vandyke proposed a game of whist. He had an old fashioned reverence for womankind, but when it came to playing whist with them he had his prejudices, but he consented. It did not escape his keen glance that his partner, Miss Blackmore, was not of his world or the type of women he had known and admired in his youth.

Certainly she had little in common with the "set" in which Mrs. Vandyke had singed her wings. But here was the voice and manner of the well bred woman of experience—experience derived from personal contact with cruel facts rather than from the dilettantism of the boudoir or the drawing room. She was, moreover, such a strong partner that he did what he had not been guilty of for 20 years—frankly pleaded that an acquaintance so pleasantly begun might not end so abruptly. Miss Blackmore smiled, handed him her card and told him she was always at 189 Broadway.

"A clever woman. No nonsense about her. I meant to hunt her up before this," said Standish aloud as he wakened from his reverie.

"One hundred and eighty-nine Broadway! What the deuce can a woman—such a woman—be doing so far down town? One thousand one hundred and eighty-nine, not 189, would bring her nearer a residential neighborhood. There must be a mistake."

But then, it was 189 on the little red book. Standish knew, or thought he knew, Broadway from Central park to the Battery. Neither hotel, apartment house nor private residence responded to any combination his fertile fancy could make out of Miss Blackmore's address.

The next night—New Year's night—a hansom drove up at the Armitage. With a carnation in his buttonhole, Standish entered, and it rumbled gayly toward 1189 Broadway, for he could not persuade himself that he had not omitted a figure from Miss Blackmore's address. No. 1189 was a street car stable.

"Drive to 981."

The red lamp of a Turkish bath for "men exclusively" reflected 981.

"Try 891." A wholesale toy house greeted cabby. When the hansom finally halted at 189, Standish alighted and scanned the directory in the hallway of a modern "scraper."

"Sixth floor—R. Blackmore, draftsman."

On the fourth floor he met the janitor.

"Does R. Blackmore live in this building?"

"There's a Miss Blackmore who has an office on the sixth floor. Never here at night. Don't you know, man, this is a holiday?"

Standish colored. "But I thought she lived here," he stammered—"had apartments, you know."

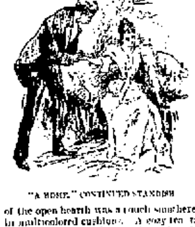
The janitor chuckled. "Miss Blackmore lives at the Columbine, Washington square, west."

"Whew!" said Standish.

As the hansom rolled back to Washington square Standish found himself face to face with the new woman in a new light. Was it the true light? He had met Miss Blackmore on purely social grounds, and in a social spirit of more than passing interest had asked to call, and she had smilingly given him her business address.

Ten o'clock found Standish in a large alcove room that played the double role of boudoir and salon. In appointment it was simple, but rich, very rich in that which his sumptuous quarters sadly missed, the indefinable touch of a woman, the intangible aroma of sweetness long drawn out.

The latest magazines were on the table. Casts from the antique and copies of the old masters were on the walls. In the shadow of the open hearth was a couch smothered in multicolored cushions. A cozy tea table, with a singing kettle, gleamed under a swinging lamp.



"A HOME," CONTINUED STANDISH.

"Just in time, Mr. Standish. I was about to have a cup of tea. You will share it with me, will you not? And I'm so sorry that two can't play whist."

She extended her hand as if they had parted but yesterday. Very simple and wholesome was Miss Blackmore in the flowing lines of an old rose tea gown. But traces of tears, the first shed in a dozen years, trembled in her dark eyes and did not escape her New Year's caller.

"When I tell you of the wild goose chase you have given me this evening, I trust you will pardon, Miss Blackmore, the lateness of this intrusion," said Standish, relating with humorous interpolation his reckless ride in pursuit of 189.

His hostess laughed—a merry laugh, with a sob in the ebb.

"How long have you lived in the Columbine?"

"Three years."

"And we have been neighbors all this time? It is ten since I went to the Armitage."

"Yes, so," said Miss Blackmore. "One of the Christian privileges of living in a cosmopolitan community. No one knows or cares who is his neighbor, provided his comfort or his exclusiveness is unmolested."

"And do you approve of this manner of living?" said Standish.

"I have never had time to give it serious thought," confessed Miss Blackmore, filling his cup. "Most of my life is spent at 189 Broadway."

"You would have preferred to have seen me there rather than here among your penates, a precious boon to me, I assure you." His flattering eyes took in the woman and the environment, each the complement of the other.

"Pray do not misunderstand me," said she with an impulsive warmth he had not suspected possible to so placid an exterior. "It was force of habit alone that prompted me to give you my business address. Since we are neighbors I will be frank. It never occurs to me, it hasn't for years, that anybody of your persuasion, any man, desires to see me on other than business matters. That will seem strange to you, perhaps, and equally strange to women who are not part and parcel of this working world. Nevertheless it is true, as hundreds of women toilers have learned, some to their profit, more to their loss. You see I have never been without responsibility. I was early forced into the world to earn my own living. I have created and held a [illegible] place in the business world. Experience has taught me [illegible] that confront the woman [illegible]."

"[illegible] does it satisfy, does it pay?"

Miss Blackmore [illegible]. It was the very [illegible] [illegible] opportune time to learn in ten minutes more of her inner life than did her closest friends? More and more she was beginning to realize that it did not satisfy her. And this night, of all others, when she had been alone, while the whole world seemed to be reviewing friendships, the thought came to her with unusual force.

"Do you believe in women voting? Do you go to their meetings, make speeches?" gasped Standish.

"No," said Miss Blackmore thoughtfully. "I believe in letting woman's work speak for itself. All existing evils will be righted in time, I think, and much speedier if women would learn to talk less and labor more individually to make themselves invaluable in whatever industry they enter."

"And you have succeeded?"

"Yes, I am counted among the successful women, and I am paying the price. I have no time for social amenities. All day down town, night finds me fatigued, happy to seek the seclusion of the Columbine. Occasionally old friends who have survived the chagrin of my seeming incivility in not returning calls, accepting invitations to luncheons, dinners and clubs drop in for cards or a chat. Then I try to keep in touch with new books, new pictures, new plays."

"Does it satisfy, does it pay, to live as you and I do, for example?" said Standish. "To pass in and out of the Armitage and the Columbine year in and year out, with nobody to say, 'God be with you going; heaven send you back!' Nobody to care whether you sink, swim, survive or perish, save the janitor or the elevator boy, who might perhaps miss a fee if neither of us ever returned in the flesh? As a student of sociology I have given the subject thought of late. Believe me, the only one it satisfies, the only one it pays, is the landlord. Oh, I tell you, it is all wrong, and it's such men, such women, as you and I that are multiplying Columbines and Armitages, libels on the sacred name of home.

"I hope you will pardon me, Miss Blackmore, for bringing business into your 'holy of holies,'" he continued, pacing the length of the cozy den. "I have a scheme in which it's my heart's desire to enlist your sympathy, your aid. Let us help wipe out bachelor apartments and maiden dens by building for ourselves a home."

She lifted her hand forbiddingly, but "love in her eyes sat playing."

"A home," continued Standish, folding her hand in his warm grasp, "with a yard in front, a yard in the rear and a yard all around, and neighbors in whose joy we at least will rejoice and with their sorrows weep."

This accounts for the disappearance of R. Blackmore from the directory of 189 Broadway. The young man Mrs. Jonathan Standish trained in her office has succeeded to the business, thus enabling him to give his mother and sister an honorable discharge from the industrial army.

LIDA ROSE McCABE.

NEW YEAR'S IN PARIS.

How Plethoric Pocketbooks Are Emptied on Poor People.

Every one utters a sigh of relief when New Year's is over. It is the day when millions of francs change pockets and the well to do the next morning think that the saying "It is better to give than to receive," is a poor salve for the contemplation of an empty pocket. Any man, woman or child having done anything directly or indirectly for the bourgeois appeals to him for his "etrennes." Ragpickers, street sweepers, gas men, telegraph boys, letter carriers, servants of one's own household, servants of houses in which you have been entertained during the year, all expect New Year's money, and the custom of giving has been one of so long standing that it is thought legally due, at least by those who receive. Men on that unfortunate day are more tired than women. They must give to every one, little and big, to their barbers, their bootblacks, to the men who serve out their drinks, to everybody in their employ. For rich bachelors it is the season of torture. They not only have the outlays of married men, but must make expensive presents in the shape of bonbonnieres filled with the most expensive bonbons and flowers to every woman whose dinners they have eaten and whose pipers have made them dance during the year. Not only must these perishing things have an intrinsic value for variety and originality, but they must bear the seal of some expensive house on the Grande boulevard, which, well aware that bargaining is not in order and that it is harvest time, makes no scruple about putting the most outrageous price on the bills. It is no wonder that many of them about New Year's are unexpectedly called away to the country or the deathbed of some distant uncle or cousin.

FESTAL DAY IN JAPAN.

All Debts Are Paid New Year's Eve. Unique Decorations.

Across the front of the house, for instance, is festooned a grass rope with a deep fringe. This is a very pleasant sort of a thing for a man to have over his door, for no evil spirit dare pass under it.

Over each entrance hangs a great tassel of grass containing a scarlet crawfish. Its crooked body symbolizes the back of the aged, bent with years.

This is surrounded with the branches of a kind of japonica, whose young leaves bud before the old ones are shed. This is typical of parents living when their children's children are born.

In the center are the leaves of the Japanese polypody, which symbolize conjugal life because the fronds spring in pairs. Endless leaves symbolize offspring.

There is also a piece of charcoal, which means home, and two little pieces of seaweed, which typify good fortune and rejoicing.

In the middle of all is the lucky bag, a square of white paper held in by a red and white string, which marks a present.

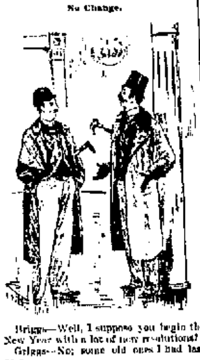
Not only the Japanese, but the Europeans in Japan also hang this tassel over their front gates. They do it partly as a compliment to the Japanese and partly for luck.

The natives have another decoration, consisting of three green bamboos with sliced tops, reminding one of organ pipes, erected on each side of the portal at a distance of six feet, the right hand one springing out of a tuft of the mematsu, which signifies the female principle, and the left hand from the omatsu, which signifies the male.

In the midst of all these emblems the national flags generally wave from black lacquered poles headed with gold balls. If the common people fail to display these flags, they are admonished by the police, and the flags go up. They are generally of white silk crape, with a red sun in the center.

A Japanese New Year's custom which it would not be amiss to import to America is that of paying all debts (except to foreigners) on the first day of the year. A man who fails to do so without leave of his creditors is dishonored. Consequently those creditors who are in debt try to sell everything which will fetch money, and in Tokyo a huge fair is held in the principal street on New Year's eve for this purpose.

No Change.



Briggs—Well, I suppose you begin the New Year with a lot of new resolutions?

Griggs—No; some old ones I had last year.

Cycles and Dinners.

Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, resurrects an old and forgotten story apropos of the new year. Some 20 students were celebrating the end of the year by a dinner. During the course of the dinner reference was made to the old belief that at the end of a cycle of 30,000 years everything is begun over again, and the hope was expressed that at the end of the cycle they would all find themselves at the same hotel eating the same dinner. The landlord, who presided, expressed his profound conviction that they would thus meet again and proposed the toast, "Till We Meet Again." This suggested a brilliant thought to the student who had been deputed to pay the bill, and addressing the landlord he proposed that the bill be allowed to stand until the next reunion. The landlord was somewhat taken aback, but he was true to his convictions and consented. But as the cashier was joyfully putting the money back in his pocket a brilliant thought occurred to the landlord also, and he said, "Since we shall be as today 30,000 years hence, we were therefore as today 30,000 years ago." "Without doubt," exclaimed everybody. "Very well, gentlemen," pursued the landlord, "then you asked credit of me then as you have today. Pay me for the dinner you had 30,000 years ago, and I will wait 30,000 years for the amount due for this one." It was done, and during the rest of the evening there was nothing more said about the supposed cycle.

Book of Fate.

It is said in Scotland that those who desire to learn what fate or fortune the new year has in store for them may do so by consulting the Bible on New Year's morning before breakfast. The sacred book must be laid upon a table, and those who wish to consult it must open it at random and place a finger upon one or other of the chapters at which it is opened. This chapter is read and is believed to describe in some way the happiness or misery during the ensuing year of the person making the trial.

Nothing to Him.

Strawler—I have been figuring all the morning on my accounts for 1894.

Singerly—How much has it cost you?

Strawler—I wasn't figuring that. I was figuring how much it cost my creditors.

Origin of Calling Custom.

The old fashioned custom of making New Year's calls comes from the Dutch. They considered the first day of the year a day of kindness and reconciliation.

Oh, give me teeth sound, white and neat,
Oh, give me breath that's pure and sweet,
Oh, give me rosy, healthful gums,
And I will meet whatever comes;
Whatever trouble may befall,
With SOZODONT I'll meet them all.

This Matter of Darning

doesn't amount to much, with the women who use Pearline. Most of it has to be done because you persist in rubbing things over the washboard so. You have to, to get them even passably clean, if you wash with soap in the old way. Use Pearline and you'll save the darning. You haven't rubbed the things to pieces, and you won't have to mend them. And another kind of darning won't suggest itself, either, for you haven't tired yourself out to the cross point with the hardest of women's work.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 411 JAMES PYLE, New York.

THE NEW ROAD.

The F., F. W. and W. Commences Running Trains.

A Shed Fired by a Spark From an Engine—Two Nickel Plate Conductors Promoted.

The Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road is now doing business, the first train out of this city leaving here at 6.30 this morning in charge of Conductor Roule, with Engineer Whitt at the throttle of engine No. 5. The train consisted of a combination mail, baggage and express car and two coaches, all new and equipped with all modern improvements. Among the passengers were Charles Bash, who went to Grover Hill, Ohio, and Frank W. Fischer, who went to Glandorf, Ohio. The latter bears the distinction of being the first person to purchase a ticket of the company at this point, and he considers it a great honor.

The first train to arrive in this city was No. 4, in charge of Conductor Lerton and Engineer Sweet, with engine No. 3, which reached here at 9:20.

The company has five locomotives and nine passenger cars, the latter quite recently out of the car shops at Wilmington, Del.

The Western Union company will handle the telegraph business, while the express will be handled by the United States Express company.

There are twenty-five stations on the line, as shown by the time card, and the road crosses four other railways as follows: Cincinnati, , Jackson and Michigan at Haviland, Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City at Cloverdale, Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton at Ottawa and the Lake Erie and Western near Findlay. The only stations of any note in Allen county are Baldwin and Townley.

In this city the company will use the Wabash union station and Messrs. Thompson and Douglass will sell tickets, while C. H. Newton will look after the freight business.

MINOR MENTION.

Lake boats have been tied up by the recent cold snap.

Wabash Trainmaster C. E. Wells, of Peru, was in the city last night.

William Altevogt, machinist at the Bass works, is off duty on account of sickness.

C. M. Bissell was yesterday appointed general manager of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road. He assumed the duties of the office this morning. His headquarters will be Findlay.

Passenger coach 179 has been turned out of the Pittsburg shops looking as good as new.

Kirby Jackson, the well known Pittsburg engineer, is suffering with a lame foot and is off duty.

Nickel Plate Brakeman J. F. Cramer, who was taking a Christmas vacation, has resumed his run.

All the clerks in the Pittsburg and the Wabash shops are very busy today, preparing their pay rolls.

The Madeleine Opera company went to Canton, Ohio, this morning on a special train over the Pittsburg.

W. A. Reese, of the Wabash machine shop, has returned from Chapin, Ill., where he spent a week with his mother.

Engine No. 1, of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western, has been taken in the Wabash shops for General repairs.

Henry Habbert, janitor at Master Mechanic Morse's office, resumed work this morning, having returned from St. Louis.

G. F. Horstmeyer and E. O. Polle of the Wabash shops, were off duty yesterday, attending the funeral of a friend.

Wabash engine No. 471 is undergoing repairs in the shop. Engine 44 left the shops this morning, after being repaired.

The local freight business of the Big Four road at Indianapolis amounted to the handsome sum of $3,500,000 for the year 1894.

The express business on the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road is being handled by the United States Express company.

J. L. Flynn is acting as foreman of the Wabash shops at Andrews, vice J. H. McClure, retired, to take a passenger run on the road.

Fireman S. Lott was taken sick at Crestline yesterday and was compelled to "dead head" home on No. 9. His ailment is not serious.

General Freight and Passenger Agent Russell, of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road, is in the city today. His offices are in Findlay.

O. J. Pond was in the city this morning. He is now holding a clerical position with the Lake Shore company at Toledo, but retains his residence at New Haven.

The empty car movement westward is increasing. It is now time that some of these cars are beginning on their return trip, loaded with grain. Traffic is still very light.

C. W. Bedson, Nickel Plate round house clerk, is still off duty, being unable to wear a shoe upon his injured foot. A few days ago he fell and sprained one of his ankles.

The Baltimore and Ohio and the Pittsburg and Western are to put on a fast freight line independent of other lines, between Chicago and New York, the trains to be run on fast schedules.

Bob Burns, engine inspector in the Pittsburg round house, bears the distinction of being the only man on the Pittsburg pay rolls at this place who worked every day in the year 1894, including Sundays.

Mrs. William Hill, wife of the Nickel Plate weighmaster, was summoned to Grand Rapids yesterday by a telegram which stated that her aunt, Mrs. Mallary, was very sick. The sick lady is seventy-six years old.

G. W. Murphy has been appointed traveling passenger agent for the Southern Pacific railway, for the southeastern states. He was formerly connected with the southern railway as its representative in this territory.

George Pohl, of 36 Buchanan street, a carpenter employed in the Pennsylvania car shops, was stricken with paralysis on Lafayette street last evening, while en route from his work. Dr. J. E. Miller attended the unfortunate man.

Sparks from a Pittsburg passenger engine, pulling out of the round house yesterday afternoon, set fire to the cupola. The volunteer fire department, composed of shopmen, were called and speedily extinguished the flames. No damage was done.

Monroeville citizens are jubilant over the prospects of another railroad reaching that place. They claim that a line from the Ohio coal fields to connect with the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western, is to be constructed and that it will pass through Monroeville.

Jacob Workman, an employe of the electric light works, lost two fingers of his right hand yesterday. He was operating a punch machine when his hand accidentally slipped into the machine with the above result. Dr. Stemen dressed the hand. He resides at 161 Hayden street.

Nickel Plate Passenger Conductor T. E. Harper has resigned and A. E. Urbahns has been promoted from the freight service to the place vacated by Mr. Harper. Ed. Gregg, a freight conductor, is also in line of promotion and is now out learning the duties of a passenger conductor.

A shed in the rear of the Standard wheel works and near the Bass blacksmith shop, was discovered to be ablaze at 1 o'clock this morning. The department was called out and soon extinguished the flames. Loss, about $75. Manager Crim, of the wheel works, thinks that the fire originated from a spark from a switch engine.

J. Tillotson, a fireman on the Grand Rapids road, met with a painful accident at Grand Rapids yesterday. The engine had been taking water and the trap door had accidentally been left open. The unfortunate man accidentally stepped into the opening and was badly strained. Medical assistance was procured for him in Grand Rapids, and another fireman secured.

The Indianapolis Journal says: "A railroad man of prominence and who is known to be generally correct in his predictions expresses the opinion that within the next five years the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy system will be controlled by the Pennsylvania Railway company, the Pennsylvania lines east of St. Louis and Chicago to be the eastern division of the great system and those west of points named the western system."

The Pittsburg furnished a special train for the accommodation of the "Welsh singers," who wished to attend the festival at Columbus, Ohio. The train left Van Wert this morning and ran to Upper Sandusky, picking up excursionists en route. Thence the train ran to Columbus over the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo road.

HOTEL BURNED.

The Miller House, at Lexington, Destroyed.

Edward Pascoe, Mrs. Masters and a Two-Year-Old Child Perish in the Flames.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 1.—The Miller hotel was burned between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning. There were four persons in the building at the time, Edward A. Pascoe and wife, his baby, about two years of age, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Masters. The wife only escaped. The fire started in the cellar, where it must have been smoldering all night, as the Pascoe's were about suffocated when awakened.

The husband assisted his wife to the window and returned to assist his mother-in-law and babe, but was not able to return. No other persons were in the hotel, which had been conducted by Pascoe, and he had made all arrangements to give it up to day, having moved his furniture out of the building.

Pascoe was twenty-six years of age and came from Nicholasville, Ky. Mrs. Masters was a widow. The building was a three story brick, belonging to Sam Miller, of Knoxville, Tenn., and was insured for $5,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

SEVENTEEN DEAD.

Such is the Appalling List of the Victims of the Delavan Hotel Fire.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Although seventeen persons, all attaches of the house, are supposed to be in the ruins of the Delavan hotel, no attempt has been made to search the ruins, for the whole mass is still so hot that work is impossible. Chief Higgins, of the fire department, says: "I don't know how many persons perished in the fire, but of their remains not even a bone will be found, for in my opinion every victim must have been completely incinerated." Up to 11 o'clock none of the persons reported missing has been located.

The purity and goodness of Dr. Price's Baking Powder are household words.

BISHOP KNICKERBACKER.

Death of the Episcopal Prelate at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 1.—Rt. Rev. David Buell Knickerbacker, D. D., bishop of the diocese of Indiana, died last evening of pneumonia.

He was born at Schaghticoke, Rensselaer county, N. Y., Feb. 24, 1833. He was the youngest son of Hermon Knickerbacker, widely known as "Prince Knickerbacker." He is alluded to by Washington Irving as "My cousin, the congressman," and when Mr. Irving visited Washington he introduced him to President Madison as "My cousin, Diedrich Knickerbacker, the great historian of New York."

Bishop Knickerbacker entered Trinity college, Hartford, Conn., and graduated from there in 1853. He entered the general theological seminary in New York city and remained there three years. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Potter in Trinity church, New York, in June, 1856, and immediately went to Minneapolis, Minn., as a missionary, officiating there for the first time Dec. 7, 1856. He was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Kemper, in Gethsemane church, Minneapolis, July 13, 1857. Minneapolis at this time was a hamlet, with a population of about 200. In 1877 Dr. Knickerbacker was elected missionary bishop of Arizona and New Mexico, which election he declined.

He was elected third bishop of Indiana in June, 1883, and on October 14 following, in St. Mark's church, Philadelphia, he was consecrated.

Mrs. Guitellius, accompanied by Mrs. Stevens, wife of the present mayor of Bluffton, are guests of the Randall over New Years.

LOOK OUT FOR BREAKERS AHEAD when pimples, eruptions, boils, and like manifestations of impure blood appear. They wouldn't appear if your blood were pure and your system in the right condition. They show you what you need—a good blood-purifier; that's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It carries health with it. All Blood, Skin and Scalp Diseases, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. It invigorates the liver and rouses every organ into healthful action. In the most stubborn forms of Skin Diseases, such as Salt-rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas, Boils and kindred ailments, and with Scrofula, in every shape, and all blood-taints, no matter from what cause arising, it is an unequaled remedy.

SCROFULOUS ABSCESSES.

MRS. BETTY SWEENEY, of Ash Top, Alcorn Co., Miss., writes: "About four years ago I took scrofula, and did everything that doctors and others prescribed, but only got worse. THE NEW AND THE OLD

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE ON THE LESSONS OF THE DAY.

He Suggests Turning Back Old Leaves Instead of Turning Over New—The New Year Fetich—A Fitting Present—A Welcome Call.

The old year is dead. Long live the new! Jan. 1 is not materially different from any other day of the year, but it seems the more important because it appeals to our hope and our imagination.

Such hosts of people have a kind of superstition concerning Jan. 1 that it might be called, as April 1 is, All Fools' day.

The greatest "call" ever made in the western hemisphere was not on Jan. 1, but on Oct. 12, 1492, when Columbus discovered a new world.

An old proverb says, "What you are on New Year's day you will always be." This, in a sense, is true, but it is equally true of any other day.

Nature would seem to be opposed to the custom of calling on New Year's, since she generally makes the day very unpleasant, as if to discourage the practice.

The Romans dedicated January to the god Janus, who was represented as two faced. To be two faced is to be hypocritical. Did they intend to intimate, satirical rogues, that the people who made visits, exchanged presents and good wishes were insincere and double dealing?

An analytic New Yorker, who used to make it a duty to pay social visits on Jan. 1, when such visits were in vogue, arose one New Year's morning determined to "call on his friends." The phrase set his analytic faculties in motion, and he concluded that he had but one friend. So he staid at home and called on himself.

The most fitting present perhaps we could make on New Year's would be to give the devil his due.

The old Romans named the presents exchanged on New Year's strenæ, whose derivative meaning is strength. If we could only give strength on this day to our weak fellow mortals, what a blessing it would be to them and to us and all the world!

Strenia was a Roman goddess who, according to Augustine, gave cheerfulness to work and also presided over New Year's presents. If any goddess could give cheerfulness to work in this discontented age, how many statues we should raise to her and how zealously we should invoke her influence!

This is the day when many of us who perceive that we have committed various follies and are generally derelict to our obligations believe that we ought to turn over a new leaf. We do turn it over repeatedly, but if we examine the new leaves impartially we will find that they are no improvement on the old. This is likely to irritate us and to make us think that we do about as well as we can anyhow. We are all inclined to believe when our will is weak that circumstances have conspired against us. It is astonishing how much we help circumstances.

Turning over a new leaf is usually little else than making promises to ourselves that we never keep.

We forget at each recurrence of the New Year that it will soon be the old year, and that at its close most of what we meant to do will still remain undone.

New Year's is a day when most of us hastily review the previous 12 months with an ardent prejudice in our own favor. We decide, on the whole, that we have been pretty good fellows, readily forgetting or explaining our errors of omission and commission. But such slight infringements as we have made of morals and rectitude we resolve to correct, and we are so satisfied with our resolve that we seldom attempt to alter our conduct at all.

If a man, instead of turning over a new leaf on New Year's, would turn back some of the old leaves on any day, read them without bias and take them to heart, he would become stronger and better.

The majority of us make a fetich of New Year's. We decorate it with crimson patches of vain regrets and tawdry rags of hollow repentance and declare ourselves reformed.

Everything new appeals to us as opposed to and different from the old. And we naturally, though unwisely, expect from the New Year what the old has not brought, unconscious that the new will not bring it either.

The fact that every people from the ancient Egyptians down to the practical Americans have either worshiped or observed New Year's is merely added evidence that the whole human family lives on hope. Hope is a divinity enshrined in every heart, whose very pulsations depend on such enshrinement.

It is not strange that the citizens of this republic have looked with dissatisfaction and disfavor on 1894, one of the hardest, gloomiest, most disastrous years in our recent history. We have reason this time to welcome New Year's as the harbinger of better days, as an earnest of prosperity and content. It is entirely safe to say that 1895 cannot be worse than its predecessor.

Since people have ceased to make calls on this day they remain at home, they declare, and get acquainted with their own families. If they should get better acquainted with themselves, it might be well, but it would scarcely add to their gratification.

Instead of talking today about turning over a new leaf, which must be by this time a pretty old leaf, we should perform some act of kindness, some deed of humanity. One such performance is worth a thousand promises.

To begin the year with uniform courtesy and consideration for every one with whom we come in contact is the fittest observation of the ever welcome day.

If we would all try to do what little good we can for those more unfortunate than ourselves, the New Year would be better than our most sanguine expectations depict it.

The old year is always as much discredited and condemned as the New Year is overrated and idealized.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

Puritans Worked on New Year's.

The sole record of the observance of the New Year by the Pilgrims in the new world named New England was most prosaic, most brief. "We went to work betimes." Many of the good Puritan ministers thought the celebration or even notice of the day in any way savored of improper and un-Christian reverence for the heathen god Janus. Yet these English settlers came from a land where New Year's eve and New Year's day were second in importance and in domestic observance only to Christmas. Throughout every English county New Year's eve was always celebrated. In many it was called by the pretty name of "Singing E'en," from the custom which obtained of singing the last of the Christmas carols at that time.

Thought He Had a Case.

It was [illegible] o'clock in the evening as the policeman passed along a quiet residence street and found a limp and listless specimen of [illegible] seated on a doorstep with his head in his hands.

"What are you doing here at this time of night?" asked the officer, shaking him.

"Just what I was an hour ago," [illegible] the man.

"What's that?"

"Waitin' for [illegible]"

"What do you want with [illegible]?"

[illegible]

"[illegible] turn her out of the winder and told me [illegible] when I first come."

"I can't arrest her unless there is a charge against her."

"Can't you make one?"

"Of course I can't. You'll have to do that yourself."

The man braced up at this information and a gleam of hope shone in his face.

"Well," he said thickly, "put a charge of breach of promise against her."

"How can you do that?" inquired the astonished officer. "Isn't she your wife?"

"Course she is."

"Then you can't bring a charge of breach of promise against her."

This time the man began to rub his eyes as if he wanted to see a little better.

"I'd like to know why I can't?" he asked. "Didn't she promise to love me in sickness and in health when she married me, and do you call it lovin' a man when a woman keeps him sittin' out on a pair of cold steps in the night air, and him in the condition I'm in? Course you don't. So you just run her in on a breach of promise charge, and I'll stand by you forever and a day."

But the officer wouldn't.—Detroit Free Press.

Victimized.

"If I live long enough," he said moodily, "I hope I'll get over being a natural mark for any bunko steerer that happens to be loose."

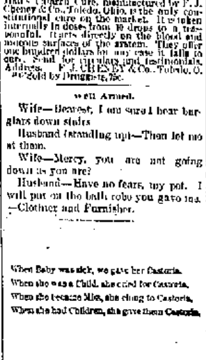
"What's the matter?"

"I concluded I'd have to economize, so I sent 50 cents to a man who said that was all he'd charge to tell me how to make a little money go a long way."

"And what did he tell you?"

He simply wrote, 'Send 5 cents by express to San Francisco.'"—Washington Star.

Use of Synonyms.



Gladys—Mamma, my teacher was talking about synonyms today. What is a synonym?

Mrs. Catherwood—A synonym, darling, is a word you can use in place of another one when you do not know how to spell the other one.—Truth.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. ☞Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Well Armed.

Wife—Dearest, I am sure I hear burglars down stairs.

Husband (standing up)—Then let me at them.

Wife—Mercy, you are not going down as you are?

Husband—Have no fears, my pet. I will put on the bath robe you gave me.—Clothier and Furnisher.

NEWS NOTES.

Ed M. Wilson went to Chicago this morning on a business trip.

The Freie Presse will hereafter be printed in the evening, as formerly.

G. W. Beers returned from Wabash last evening to spend New Years with his family.

Rev. J. V. Updike, pastor of the Christian Tabernacle at Valparaiso, is in the city.

Louis Gardis has sold the Wenninghoff property, 110 West Jefferson street, to Mary E. Sturgeon.

The new Clay street school will be opened for occupancy by the pupils and teachers tomorrow.

Prof. Zucker, of the Concordia college, preached a New Year's sermon at Huntington this morning.

S. C. Ketcham, of Kalamazoo, Mich., who has been in the city for the past six weeks, left for Indianapolis yesterday morning.

Clarence E. Wallace is at Huntington where he attended the funeral of his mother, Mrs Wm. Wallace, whose death occurred Sunday.

Peter Freiburger, one of the drivers at the Central engine house, is suffering with a carbuncle on his chin, and is off duty in consequence.

D. H. Armaul, formerly pressman for Archer, Housh & Co., was in the city yesterday for a few hours. He is now with O. W. Conklin at Chicago.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Barney O'Connor returned from Chicago. Mr. O'Connor has almost entirely recovered from the recent severe operation he underwent and he will soon be seen on the streets again.

The result of the curling game played yesterday at Brookside farm was as follows: James Gillie, 24, John Gillie, 22, John Pickton, 21, John Kidd, 18, John H. Bass, jr., 22, Robert Dickson, 15. There will be a single handed contest at Brookside farm this afternoon for a gold medal.

The board of school trustees has appointed Miss Mary A. Pyle to the vacant position in the high school. Miss Pyle is a graduate of the West-chester (Penn.) normal, has had five year's experience as a teacher and has been for the last two years a successful teacher at the University of Michigan.

L. E. Beaver leaves this evening for Kansas City.

Nearly all the business houses in the city were closed today.

Services were held at all the Catholic churches in the city today.

There are no new cases of diphtheria at the jail and the three patients are all getting along nicely.

The skating is very fine all about Fort Wayne and young and old have been having a fine day of sport.

Joe Will, who has been visiting his parents in this city, has gone to Camden, Ohio, where he has charge of the press rooms in a large job office.

There was a lively time on the streets at midnight last night but not as much drunkenness as some other years owing to the fact that the saloons were closed at 11 o'clock as usual.

H. C. Prow and wife of Lagrange county, are in the city the guests of John Delman and family. Mr. Prow is one of the leading farmers in the northern part of the state.

The Harrison Telephone company commenced their telephone service in Lafayette today with 400 subscribers. This is the same company which is soliciting subscribers in Fort Wayne. They have already about 300 names on their list.

This being a legal holiday, all the saloons in the city were closed. There was some selling going on, but it was done on the sly. No drunken men and boys were seen on our streets and the day was just what the first day of the year should be.

One of the handsomest menues of the season seen at the city hotels is that of the New Year's dinner at the Randall. It is hand painted in gold and the centerpiece is a beautiful likeness of Dick Townsend's little son, Bert, who has an unusually bright and pretty face.

Will Kyburz, who for the past three years has been assistant secretary at the Y. M. C. A., has resigned his position and will spend the next two weeks with his brother in the country. After that time he has not exactly decided what line of work he will follow, having two or three offers under consideration. He is an excellent young man and has made many friends since he has resided in Fort Wayne. Mr. Kyburz's place at the Y. M. C. A. has not yet been filled.

A misunderstanding, which came near ending in a rough and tumble fight, occurred at the Wabash Union station this morning. The American Express company, up to last night, handled the express business on the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road. The contract expired with the old year and the railway people let the express contract to the United States company. The American company's agent refused to turn the business over and force was used in ejecting the messenger from the car. The patrol was summoned, but before the police reached the scene the matter was settled. The United States company [illegible] for the time being.

To the... PUBLIC!

WEDNESDAY, January 2nd, at 9:30 a. m., we begin a (genuine) Cost Sale, including everything in our store, nothing held back. The public is aware of the fact that we have no shelf-worn goods to dispose of, but everything being entirely new.

THIS Item alone in being able to buy brand new Merchandise for Actual Cost, and not having to pick and select from a stock accumulating for ten or fifteen years, ought to crowd our store from Morn till Night.

LINENS, MUSLINS, SHEETINGS and MUSLIN UNDERWEAR

Play important parts in this sale. Never in the history of these Annual Sales have these articles (which are so handsome and useful) been sold for so little money and a more complete line to select from was never shown in any store in Northern Indiana.

We Ask You - - - -

Hotelkeepers,
Proprietors of Restaurants,
Housekeepers, Etc.,

That need anything in this line to call and inspect our goods, as we are positive that you never saw equal trustworthy goods for so little money.

(Nothing Charged During This Sale.)
